And a Big Copper Mine

Complicated Industry

Many Chances Remain

By Arthur Brisbane

HODGE, CAL., Feb. 26—Back from beyond the Mexican border to read news that does not interest Mexico much, the victory of Mayor Thompson in Chicago, that of the prohibition amendment in the Supreme Court, the bonus question, Muscle Shoals question, wheat problem, and a rising stock market.

Many things, important when you dwell among them, seem trivial a few miles away, and a few thousand feet up in the mountains. On the way through Tucson you read the Mexican paper, El Tucsonenze, ably managed, and learn about a Hipoteca que deposito $250,000 en 6 anos. "A policeman that deposited $250,000 in six years." This energetic New York defender of the public earned, it seems, four thousand a year as policeman, and the Mexican editor, R. E. Vda de Moreno, wonders at the opportunities that our nation offers to energy and talent.

Mr. "Pepper," who has sold newspapers from coast to coast, the Evening American in Chicago and the Examiner in San Francisco, calls out the Tucson Daily Citizen, owned and published by Frank B. Hitchcock, who used to be postmaster-general. "Pepper" and General Hitchcock agree, after trying everything else, that Tucson is the place.

And "Pepper" wishes the world to know that he is expecting Mr. Rockefeller any day now, and Paderewski is just coming in, on his "private car." "You could live 10 years for what he gets just for playing the piano, once. Soft!" says Mr. "Pepper."

News of bread riots threatening in Paris proves that conditions can change as suddenly, in prosperous France, as they did not long ago in prosperous Wall Street. The wise men asking what causes the world trouble are as foolish as a drunkard, unable to understand what causes his headache the next morning. The world is paying for the war, the butchering of twenty million men, at a cost of two hundred and fifty billion dollars.

His father's fortune had made him rich. Opium made him a beggar. The big war was the world's opium. But the world will struggle out of its trouble, and perhaps know better next time. In any case, this nation should keep out of European leagues, world courts, and everything else that could drag us into the next debauch.

In Hollywood, where everything is stupendous, a lady is suing a well-known moving picture director and producer for six hundred and one thousand dollars. She charges that when she kept an appointment to discuss her desire to rise in her profession, the gentleman was guilty of a serious social affront. Everything in the law suit is taken for granted, except the one thousand tacked on the six hundred thousand dollars. An insult might be worth six hundred thousand or a million, but how can it be worth exactly six hundred and one thousand? A cynic suggests that a press agent added the one to make the suit interesting.

If you own copper stocks, you are engaged by proxy in an interesting, changing business and might learn about it by visiting the Cananea copper mine, a little south of the Mexican border, near Douglas, Ariz. That mine had stock selling a $8 a share. Copper running as high as 40 per cent was found and the stock jumped to $200 a share. Now the Anaconda Copper Co. owns it.

Cananea in normal times pays the Southern Pacific railroad a freight bill of $1,000,000 a year. Mr. Weed, manager of the mine, a blue-eyed young American from the Michigan School of Mines, with his forehead leaning out above his eyes, learned the real business working in a mine after graduating. He continues learning the business by running one of the greatest mines on earth.

He shows you millions of dollars' worth of machinery that was "the latest" a while ago, and is now junk, and idle, waiting to be torn out. You see smelters that would have delighted Cotton Mather, enabling him to make descriptions of hell more vivid. Torrents of burning oil pour into the furnaces through five pipes, producing a heat of almost 4000 degrees, separating the copper from iron, sulphur, etc., in the ore.

The iron floats on top of the molten mass and with other materials lighter than copper is drawn off as fat is skimmed from a soup pot, forming slag. That slag would make the best road material, brick, or stone

Shortly afterward Fred Conti, a local dealer, began organizing a new committee of business men and women to effect a strike settlement. It is reported that Rev. James A. Mullonald, pastor of St. Mary Church, was instrumental in getting him to do so.

She and Patrick J. Devine, national secretary of the Textile Workers Union, are charged with conspiracy to injure mill property and intimidate workers. Bail of $10,000 was asked for Devine.

Devine had been arrested and strike leaders were demanding his release before negotiating further when five plain clothes officers, led by City Marshal Timothy J. O'Brien, entered the headquarters on Essex st.

CONGRESS TO ACT QUICKLY ON VETO

Members Prepared to Hit at Hoover on Veterans' Loan Bill

Washington, Feb. 26 (AP)—Congress set itself for quick action today on President Hoover's veto of the veterans' loan bill.

The message of disapproval was expected to reach the Capitol late in the afternoon. Speaker Longworth determined to give every member of the house right of way, so that house might register its determination to pass the legislation regardless.

If the expected overwhelming majority develops, the bill will be sent direct to the Senate, which, in turn, must line up two-thirds of its membership to override the President's will.

Both Senate and House proponents of the ecisiation were confident a crushing defeat would be handed the administration.

The House passed the bill, estimated to cost the government $750,000,000 or more, 363 to 39 and the Senate by a vote of 72 to 12.

RESTAURANTS DANCE HALLS INCLUDED IN INQUIRY

Police Commissioner Praises American's Expose of the Conditions

Praising the Boston Evening American for its expose of the activities of the Boston vice ring, Police Commissioner Eugene C. Hultman said today he was planning a systematic police survey of restaurants, dance halls and other resorts.

Commissioner Hultman, who declared himself amazed at the ramifications of the vice ring, said the investigation would be the most serious problem confronts the police department.

"Frankly" he said, "I had no idea that various forms of vice had such a foothold in restaurants and dance halls in this city, particularly in the afternoons.

"I am studying thoroughly the evidence gathered by our officers and I am preparing to meet the situation with some form of special and systematic survey of these resorts.

PRAISES AMERICAN

"More can be done in the homes, through proper instruction of children, to stamp out immorality and its tragic consequences suffered by misguided children than all the work that could be done by the police or social workers.

"Education in these matters through publication in newspapers is the strongest single force for combatting vice and the Boston Evening American, through its current articles, has furthered that education to a great degree."

He said the articles and the warning they contain to mothers of young girls particularly, were of great value to the morals of the community and a public service.

TRUE JUNGLE THRILLS "BRING 'EM BACK ALIVE" STIRRING PICTURES IN TOMORROW'S AMERICAN

SCARFACE AL PROVES HE'S A GANGSTER WITH PLENTY OF 'IT'

GIRLS A-QUIVER TO GET PEEK AT HIM IN COURT

He Declares He's Doing Well and Will Not Be Tempted Into Literary Work

Chicago, Feb. 26 (INS)—If he ever decides to stop supplying Chicago and vicinity with inspirational beverages, Scarface Al ought to be welcomed with open arms by Hollywood, the vaudeville magnates, the revue producers, the radio, and such publishers as have autobiographical leanings.

For, it was clearly demonstrated today, this man Capone — 350 pounds of gangster—has that certain something called box-office appeal. He's a big drawing card—big, well-dressed and prosperous-looking. In his court appearances here the so-called czar of the underworld is stopping the show. Women stenographers, clerks and other help in the Federal building are all a-twitter to get a glimpse of him.

CROWDS WAIT TO SEE HIM

The doors of the courtroom in which he tells the judge about his illness are jammed by crowds paralleled only by those around the hat bargains in a department store. Outside, in the street, hundreds of curious and unemployed stand for hours to get a peek at him.

From some of the women fortunate enough to see the gang chief came such remarks as: "Why, he's good-looking, isn't he?" "My dear, talk about sex appeal!" "Wonder who his tailor is?"

There was a platinum, diamond-studded watch chain across his waistcoat. He wore a diamond ring. The pearl gray spats and a white silk handkerchief in his coat pocket served admirably to set off his rich blue suit.

REAL ESTATE MAN

Capone is a real estate man (so he said at the detective bureau) and in both this capacity and as a mere human being he must perforce be a booster for the Florida atmosphere. His vacation in the sunny climes has done him a world of good, according to his intimates. So much good that he really ought to do a little reducing.

The "big fellow" is being treated with all the solicitation due his rank and riches. It was Commissioner of Police John Alcock himself who said: "We don't want Capone killed in Chicago."

Scarface talked quite freely to reporters who asked about his plans for the future.

"No," he said, "I'm not going into the movies. Neither am I going to write my autobiography. It probably would make me a lot of money. I have been offered as high as $2,000,000, including movie, serial and book rights. But I'm not going into the literary business."

And with all that he is held in $10,000 bonds on a vagrancy warrant. This warrant was issued by Judge John H. Lyle, who devotes himself to the pursuit of gangsters. He went to the detective bureau to have the warrant served on him, furnished bond, and went back to federal court to hear the proceedings before Judge Wilkerson in which he is charged with contempt of court for not appearing on schedule.

Dr. Martha E. Lovell of the Massachusetts Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Children chaperoned the girls also.

WOMAN GRABS KEYWORKERS AT HER HOME

Youths Beat Her and Escape, but Are Soon Caught by Arlington Police

Bravely grasping two South Boston youths, who, according to police, were trying to break into her apartment, Mrs. K. L. Baker, a comely young matron, of 15 Jason st., Arlington, was roughly mauled by the men in escaping from her hands.

The men were later arrested when five extra policemen were sent to the neighborhood. They were booked on charges of attempting to break and enter and assault and battery on Mrs. Baker. They gave their names as Albert H. Crimmins, 19, of 11 Telegraph st. and James C. Walsh, 20, of F st., South Boston.

According to the Arlington police, Mrs. Baker, who is 32 years of age, was returning to her apartments from a visit to a neighboring apartment when she saw the two men trying to open her door with a key.

The police say she asked them what they wanted and they gave conflicting answers.

"I know what you're trying to do; you are trying to break into my apartment," she replied, and then grasped both of them and tried to hold them. They bit her and broke away, according to the police.

Mrs. Baker telephoned Arlington police headquarters and within 10 minutes Crimmins and Walsh were under arrest.

INDICTMENTS IN STOCK PROBE EXPECTED

Grand Jury Reports on the N. E. Investors Shares, Inc., After Two Weeks' Probe

As a result of an investigation involving between three and eight million dollars and the affairs of the bankrupt New England Investors Shares, Inc., it is expected the Suffolk grand jury will report a number of secret indictments to Judge Harold T. Williams tomorrow.

The investigation, conducted by Asst. Atty.-Gen. Louis H. Sawyer, has been before the Grand Jury two weeks. The corporation has been bankrupt since 1928.

Among the witnesses called were James M. Swift, of Fall River, former attorney-general, and Edmund H. Talbot, Boston lawyer.

PROMINENT MEN

Both had been directors and Swift had served as counsel for the corporation and Talbot as treasurer at one time.

It is understood that several men prominent in financial affairs were investigated.

The corporation operated through a discount corporation and officers of that corporation have been investigated.

Much evidence of a documentary nature was presented by Miss Lucy G. Perriello, an auditor for Joseph F. Bassity, counsel for Swift and Talbot, and by Herman B. Cohen, a public accountant for the Attorney-General.

TWO REPORTS

During an investigation by Benjamin A. Levy, named by Suffolk Superior Court as master to hear and determine facts between the receiver and certain officers, as to their individual liability for losses, it was developed that dividends were paid out of capital and that there was a large deficit.

It was found that two financial reports had been made in relation to the operations of the corporation. One showed that in excess of $3,000,000 was supposed to be due from customers as payments for stock bought on the partial payment plan, while no mention of this was made in the other.

STATE ACTS IN GRIFFITH SUIT

Los Angeles, Cal., Feb. 26 (INS)—The district attorney today ordered a complete investigation into circumstances surrounding the filing of a $601,000 damage suit by Fern Setril, 22-year-old extra girl, against D. W. Griffith, motion picture producer and director.

The complaint filed by the actress charged that she was attacked by Griffith on June 25, 1930.

The district attorney decided to investigate the case following a conference with representatives of Griffith's attorney.

As investigators delved into the case, it was learned that on Aug. 8, 1930, Mrs. Setril filed a divorce suit against Frank X. Setril, accusing him of cruelty and threatening her with a gun.

Her husband filed an answer on Dec. 2 in which he accused his wife of intimacies with an unnamed man. Mrs. Setril was granted an interlocutory divorce decree by default on Jan. 3, 1931.

HOOVER HELD AS AUTO VIOLATOR

"Herbert Hoover!"

The calling of this name in municipal court today caused a stir, and all eyes were turned toward a 22-year-old youth who advanced to the bench.

This Herbert Hoover, living in Edgecliff rd., Watertown, was in court for violation of the "full stop" ordinance at Berkeley st. and Commonwealth ave., Back Bay. The charge was placed on file.

Hoover said his father, whose full name, Herbert C. Hoover, is identical with that of the President, was born 50 miles from the birthplace of President Hoover.

The Watertown youth is a graduate of the University of Nevada and came to Boston four months ago from Reno to become a claim adjuster for the Fidelity and Casualty Insurance Company.

There was a wave of sentiment applause from the audience, although other remarks of the State senator received much hand-clapping.

California Now Has Real Flying Governor

California aviation enthusiasts had no idea of letting "Sunny Jim's" aerial bent stop there. A cabin plane for his own was provided for in the pending budget.

There was some conjecture whether the Governor would fly his own ship. It would rob him of little rags he steals on long journeys. The Governor's son is a full-fledged pilot.

which doors were battered down and furniture wrecked, seven others were arrested.

A large crowd of strikers, composing the radical element, jeered the raiders and some tried to interfere with the police.

This drastic move to smash the influence of radicals from other cities over local employes of the American Woolen Company followed action by the leaders intended to delay a strike settlement vote, which had been scheduled for today.

Earlier in the day vice-president Moses Pendleton of the company ordered the Washington, Wood and Ayer mills closed until the strike was settled. More than 15000 who reported for work were sent away.

Mayor Michael A. Landers and two members of the citizens' committee then tried to induce the union organizers o launch the vote. There was some "stalling" and then came Devine's arrest, whereupon the leaders demanded that Mayor Landers secure his release. The mayor said he had no authority in the matter.

RAIDS ARE STAGED

The leader gave Mayor Landers half an hour to decide whether he would get Devine released, and negotiations were at this stage when the raids occurred.

An obstacle to peaceful settlement of the strike by non-radicals appeared when the weavers of the Washington mill, who have no allegiance to the union, sent a committee to Agent Ernest A. Johnson, demanding time and a half pay for overtime work and 10 per cent extra pay for night work.

The mill agent met this demand with a flat rejection and the committee informed him that the weavers would not return to work. Without weavers the mill cannot operate.

Those arrested today, in addition to Devine and Miss Berkman, were all charged with interfering with police officers. They are:

Morris Winter, 38, of Salem, N. H.; Carmine Vittale 28, of Elm st., Lawrence; Tachnir Abraham, 36, of Franklin st., Arthur Augusto, 26, Oak st.; Angelo Zappala, Oak st., Methuen; Bruno Bellemore, 18, Excel st., Lawrence; William Murdock, 31, of Philadelphia; an official of the union.

In the charges against Devine and Miss Berkman it is alleged that machine bells were clashed when strikers invaded the three mills last Saturday. Heretofore officials of the company had denied that any damage was done.

Conti, who set about trying to organize a committee willing to make a peaceful settlement, is declared to have told the citizens' committee at City Hall that he realized the workers were the victims of "a lot of rats."

DENOUNCED BY PRIEST

Earlier Conti had asserted that he would participate in no negotiations until Devine was released. Reports were current that he talked with Father McDonald and then announced a change of front. The priest denounced the radicals from out of town in a sermon Sunday evening.

Sarkis Twomian, 36, of Lawrence st., this city, arrested yesterday for passing out handbills relating to the strike, without a permit, was fined $10 in district court today and appealed.

A mass meeting, representing the National Defense Committee, a branch of the Civil Liberties League, appeared for Twomian and later represented Devine in bail action.

The economic future of this city, New England's leading textile center, was at stake as the day's events, a series of surprise moves by all parties involved, occurred.

The American Woolen Company agreed to grant all demands except that of time and a half pay for overtime work. Defying their radical leaders, a large group of strikers last night voted to ballot on these terms today, but they were without organization and leadership and Mayor Landers had to ask the radical leaders to get the voting underway.

If the company's terms are not accepted, the mills will be shut down indefinitely and orders on hand will be placed in other mill cities, it was declared by company heads.

MILLS ARE CLOSED

The Washington, Wood and Ayer mills of the American Woolen Company opened this morning after a day's shutdown, and between 1500 and 2000 reported for work, but there were not enough present to operate the machinery, and Vice-President Pendleton's order to close the gates followed.

Detachments of police are patrolling strategic points as usual and pickets were again on duty today at the mill entrances. Groups of strikers gathered at several halls, and some thronged around the police station.

About 150 of the 1000 striking employes of the Pilot Radio & Tube Co., met in the guardroom of police headquarters, and voted to steer clear of the radical leaders of the textile organization, although the pamphlets distributed by the latter are believed to have caused this strike.

ARE PROMISED AID

These strikers were promised the full co-operation of the Central Labor Union provided they enter into no agreement with the radical organization.

The split in the ranks of the strikers came last night after a stormy meeting at which the charge was buried at the radical leaders from out of town that they were depositing strike funds in their own names at local banks.

Before this meeting began, the leaders, representing the Textile Workers' Union, had rejected the company's terms.

SPEECHES INVITED

After Sergt. Francis Tiernan presented the case for the government with Capt. Jeremiah Gallivan and Inspector Stephen J. Flaherty as witnesses, Judge Duff announced that any who wanted to make a speech could.

Canter was first to respond but didn't get far when his doubts of police veracity in testimony drew the condemnation of the court.

Succeeding ones started well—the first sentence—then drifted into the bewailing subject of dole, demands or unemployment until Judge Duff rapped the gavel.

For the first time in the arrests of Communists on the Common a blanket complaint charged each with rioting on Boston Common.

Judge Duff made a guilty finding on that charge against each one and placed them on file with the understanding they could be removed from the file to be used against any in future cases.

BLAKE ESTATE CLAIM HEARD IN LONDON

Mrs. Minahan Petitions for the Property of the Wealthy Widow Who Died in 1876

London, Feb. 26 (AP)—A petition by Annie Murtha Minahan, of Charlestown, Mass., claimant to the so-called "Blake millions," came up before Justice Maugham in Chancery Court here today.

The case, which has been pending for a long time, was explained by Sir Stafford Cripps, appearing for the crown, as concerned with the estate of Helen Blake, widow, who died in 1876 and was popularly reported to have left a large fortune, running into millions of pounds.

Mrs. Blake was a member of an Irish family named Sheridan and many claims have been put forward by persons who have declared themselves to be descendants of the Sheridan family. Recently there have been many claims from the Blake side, but all the pleas so far have been held groundless because of lack of documentary proof of descent.

Sir Stafford said the fortune left by Mrs. Blake was actually not millions of pounds bu only £75,000 (about $375,000), which on a court order had gone to the crown, there being no next of kin.

The crown's principal point at today's hearing was that Mrs. Minahan's claim was barred by the statute of limitations. Her attorney, however, contended this was a case where the statute of limitations did not apply.

The three Greater Boston women claimants to shares in the Blake estate went to England a year ago to press their claims. They are Mrs. Annie Minahan of Monument ave. and Miss Ella Leonard of Mt. Vernon st., both of Charlestown, and Mrs. Mary Flynn of Waldemar ave., Winthrop.

They were accompanied by Charles W. F. Scott of New York city, who worked in the interests of the claimants for several years. Mrs. Minahan was said to be the nearest of kin of the American group.

MAGICIAN TO AID DEATH PROBE

Cambridge, England, Feb. 26 (AP)—To the scientific crime detection methods of Scotland Yard there may be added the lore of "magicians" in an effort to solve the mystery of the death of Francis Charles Ellis, young Cambridge freshman, who was found dead, trussed and gagged in his dormitory room early this week.

Will Goldston, past president of the University Magicians Club, today offered his services to the authorities if expert testimony were desired. In the meantime he gave a demonstration to the press to prove his contention that Ellis could not have tied himself and therefore the case was not one of suicide as the Scotland Yard experts indicated they believed.

"Houdini could not have tied himself in that manner," Goldston said, "and there is not a magician in the profession who could. I am willing to give evidence at the inquest and to demonstrate the impossibility of such self-tying."

MILLEN LOST RUM PERMIT

Building enlargements even after suspension of a federal liquor permit were admitted today in court by Joseph Millen, former treasurer of the Bay State Wholesale Drug Co.

In a $100,000 suit against Rodolphe Agassiz, the company charges loss of business through alleged conspiracy of Agassiz and three other North Shore men and suspension of the company's permit through sale of liquor to the four.

Agassiz also is charged with conversion of one barrel of Sherwood rye whiskey seized by federal agents and later returned.

Millen testified the federal permit was suspended in September, 1920, and that the company's building was enlarged later the same month.

He said the permit was revoked six or eight months afterward and that the company meantime had refused an offer of $40,000 for its transfer to two Boston men.

FATHER TRIES TO GET TRACE OF BRIDE

Wealthy Mill Owner Will Not Ask for an Annulment if Daughter Is Happy

The former Violette M. Jolley, 16-year-old eloping heiress of Harrisville, R. I., and her 18-year-old husband are believed on their way to Hollywood, her father, Charles W. Jolley, retired millman, said today.

The father said he had broadcast word through federal and state authorities to locate the young couple, but would make no effort to bring them back if his daughter is happy.

The bridegroom is Edward Priestley of Pascoag, R. I., a son of mill workers formerly employed in the Jolley mills at $20 a week.

"I shall make no attempt to have the marriage annulled or bring them back if my daughter is happy," Mr. Jolley said. "They have probably headed for Hollywood in her roadster, as she met some movie people a few years ago and is most enthusiastic about the films.

"They have nearly $3200, Violette having drawn a trust fund of $190 which she inherited. As long as the money lasts love may last. If they reach Hollywood and my daughter is happy I shall go out there and arrange so that Priestley can earn enough money to support her properly. Her grandfather says, however, he will change his will in which Violette is named chief beneficiary."

It is reported that change in the will will cost her $500,000.

Mr. Jolley said he had not approved of the marriage and had tried to break up the romance between his daughter and young Priestly, chiefly because of her age. For the latter reason he has asked the authorities to watch out for the couple.

Metropolitan policyholders—including about one-fifth of the total populations of United States and Canada—have built up their reserves from millions into billions.

THE financial story below is a record of achievement by men and women who are planning to avert want or to build estates. You may admire their steadfastness of purpose last year under handicaps which tested courage.

These people—policyholders of the Metropolitan Life Insurance Company—are building for their future. They would like to know what the future holds in store for them and for the country as a whole.

Let them, and other citizens, examine any chart of our country's unparalleled prosperity over the past hundred years. It appears, not merely as a jagged line, but as a series of towering steps which rise steadily onward and upward.

It is heartening now to recall that, after each depression, our country has always gone forward to greater heights of prosperity and better, sounder standards of living. Today this country has more riches and better facilities than ever before with which to commence her next great period of development.

A review of the financial history of the United States since it was founded in 1783 should turn any pessimist into an optimist.

The Metropolitan will gladly mail, free, a booklet, "The Development of Prosperity in America", telling of past ups and downs—and ups again—and how soon the "ups" followed.

BIG VICTORIES IN FIGHT ON NARCOTICS

By WINIFRED BLACK

San Francisco, Feb. 26 (US)—Inch by inch—foot by foot—mile by mile, the long, hard fight against "dope" is beginning to win.

For years America has been the world's dumping ground for "dope."

We've made laws, and broken them.

We have set penalties and ignored them.

But finally we've faced the truth about dope slavery in this and every other "civilized" country on the face of the globe.

And when we finally did face the truth, the lies and the subterfuge and the deceit and the excuses began to fade.

TWO NEW VICTORIES

In the last eight months two great battles have been won in America's fight against the drug ring.

The narcotic control conference in session for May, in London, with the frankly avowed intention of discussing openly and honestly a plan to limit not only the control of narcotic drugs, but to limit very definitely, indeed, the production of it.

These delegates have promised to discuss with open minds the ways and means of limiting the entire production of narcotic drugs, to the amount actually needed in actual medical practice.

That's a long step—just the promise to consider this plan and discuss it openly.

ENFORCEMENT BOLSTERED

In our own country we have done some wonderful things in that last eight months.

We have taken the control of narcotics away from the prohibition bureau and given the narcotic commissioner an office and a position of his own so he can stand on his own feet and carry out the law on his own responsibility without calling any other department into any sort of consideration whatsoever.

Commissioner Anslinger, the man at the head of the narcotic bureau today, appears to know his business, and there doesn't seem to be the slightest doubt that Mr. Anslinger spends most of his time and his energy and his trained intelligence in attending strictly to that business.

A million dollars' worth of opium started for the United States was caught in China not so long ago.

Two million dollars' worth of dope, already landed and ready to flood the country with a hideous disease that is worse than death, was seized on the docks in New York city a few weeks ago.

In San Francisco, Mr. Anslinger's local force picked up over a quarter of million dollars' worth of dope floating in San Francisco bay.

How About Lots of Blindfold Resignations

By ARTHUR "BUGS" BAER

Prince of Wales enjoys eating and drinking in South America. Eddie, we've got good cooking up here, too.

Supreme Court just issued its weekly opinion on prohibition. And also tacked a congratulatory rider on the Eighteenth Amendment. For tree-ripened fruit, that's been hanging on a long time.

Charley Chaplin's heraldic device will be a baggy coat-of-arms with the elbows out. Intersected by an astonished expression rampant on a field of cultured pie azure.

We hope they don't make Charley a baron because only earls walk that way.

We are waiting for this busy Congress to adjourn so we can replace those foot-worn desks.

Britten is right about trying to steer a boat from a swivel chair.

What this country needs is more important resignations.

And that last Navy budget won't even pay for the tattooing.

ANTI-DRY BOOED BY EDUCATORS

Detroit, Feb. 26 (AP)—The National Education Association, department of superintendence, adopted a resolution today upholding the Eighteenth Amendment. Dr. Daniel S. Kealey of Hoboken, N. J., opposed.

On a standing vote a few stood up for the negative and were booed.

Kealey said prohibition has become a political as well as a social issue and is one which concerns "legislators, not educators."

He argued that adoption of the prohibition resolution would be used by a "political group."

Referring to the resolution stating that alcoholic beverages are harmful to morale, Kealey declared that there are now 5,000,000 unemployed men whose morale is low, but that "not a single bootlegger or gunman is in the bread line."

The New Jersey educator was interrupted by cries of "throw him out," and "sit down."

Detroit Holds Man Without a Country

Detroit, Feb. 26 (AP)—John A. Rodunske, who has been an immigration prisoner in the county jail since September 25, today found himself a man without a country.

United States immigration officers have ordered his deportation to Canada, the Canadian Government has refused to admit him and the German consul, representing the land of his birth, has failed to issue a passport to allow Rodunske's deportation to Germany.

1000 DOCTORS FACE ARREST IN RUM PLOT

New York, Feb. 26 (US)—One hundred picked men of the Department of Justice opening a series of raids have exposed a gigantic liquor diversion syndicate that will involve 1000 doctors, 500 druggists, and annual profits ranging from $5,000,000 to $20,000,000.

With the arrest of Bernstein and his wife, Sadie, the Department of Justice sleuths seized between 1500 and 2000 prescription blanks, said to have been signed in blank by dozens of physicians.

GIRLS MENACED BY APARTMENT "RACKET"

The second interview with Miss Pauline Bachelder, social worker, appears today. She tells of "misunderstood" husbands, a new racket for leading girls into vice.

By RUTH MUGGLEBEE

The "misunderstood" husband racket works profitably in Boston in luring girls of school age into lives of dishonor, Miss Pauline Bachelder, social worker, revealed today.

Traffic in young girls by married men is daily increasing. And for every "misunderstood" husband there is an "accommodation" apartment in the Back Bay where he can take his "little pal" for a quiet and undisturbed evening, she said.

It is actually a racket, Miss Bachelder claimed, basing her conclusions on the hundreds of stories that are told her by the young girls whose lives and attitudes are rebuilt and resurrected by the Massachusetts Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Children, for which she is an agent.

SENTIMENTAL APPEAL

"Some of the men are married. Some are not. But under the guise of misunderstood husbands these men play on the sympathetic and sentimental appeal to young girls in leading them away from honest work and the straight reward," she continued.

"These apartments are purposely furnished luxuriously as sort of contrast to the humble homes from which most of the victims come. Free from the drudgery of home, the congestion, the tight pocketbook, economic stress, free from everything that spells penury and denial, the apartments make a strong appeal to these uninitiated and the young girls are awed.

"And they look so comfortable and so much like a smart home instead of a sin-den that the girls are made to feel like one of a party, instead of a vice victim. They give her a good time. They make her enjoy herself. They talk easy money and easy living to her.

"All through the Back Bay such apartments exist. The apartment menace is growing and as it grows the age of sex delinquency becomes younger.

"The apartment racket, an old idea in new clothing, is a graduation from the old lodging house problem. There still remain many sections of the city where lodging houses are centers of vice.

"Take lodging houses in the South End. They look alike. They are all in a row and young girls, with the spirit of bravado and "good sportsmanship," enter them without noting where they are or what their street numbers may be. Trouble for girls start in those houses.

BOTH KEEP QUIET

"In these places the longing for is very small—$3 or 75 cents. Vice on a cheaper scale is carried out here. And in this instance, it is a proposition of mutual silence.

"Married men make use of this racket, telling girls to keep quiet about it and they'll do the same. Married men take girls to these houses, pay their rent for them and persist in the misunderstood alibi.

"Our lodging houses present the worst menace. Hotels are subject to regulation and it isn't so easy to get by. Hence the reason for the apartment racket. Leased by one woman, she alone is responsible. It looks respectable. But should one look behind the scenes one would find beautiful young girls, pajama-clad, lounging around soft divans.

"But this is highly organized vice. The young, deluded things who come to me haven't reached that stage of expensive luxury. These youngsters, satisfied with a good meal and a pretty dress, always bought before the party, think the world has been placed at their feet.

"Jane, that isn't her name, but she is a typical case, was a young girl about 14. She was picked up and we were called in. In telling me her story, the usual tale—that he was married but his wife didn't understand him—she repented time and time again that he was good to her. He was so smart and so much older that the girl was thrilled that he even bothered with her.

WANTED A "PAL"

"He only wanted her to be his pal and she couldn't refuse. He took her to lovely apartments where everything was so beautiful and clean, with lovely colored linen and soft beds, with colored pillows on the floor and beautiful floor lamps—much as is the illusion this young girl carried around with her.

"And then came the denouement — the grand awakening. They went into court. He called her a little tramp. He wanted to get rid of her but she clung to him. And Jane learned about men from him. Funny what loyalty these betrayed girls have to their betrayers. Many of them refuse to tell us who or what about them.

"But let them get into court and have the man "walk out" on them, as it were, and they tell everything. They shed bitter tears, tears of experience and tragic reckoning. They wake up to the fact that it was only a racket—a racket of misunderstood husbands—there isn't anything worse."

(Tomorrow Miss Bachelder will tell of modern mothers and their menacing influence on young daughters.)

Fitted Bag, Queen's Gift to Court Bride

London, Feb. 26 (INS)—Queen Mary, departing from her usual custom of presenting brides in the intimate court circle with jewelry set with the royal cypher, today presented a dressing case to the Hon. Imogen Grenfell, on the occasion of her marriage to Viscount Gage. The bag is of green morocco leather, with the top covered with a circular plaque of white jade. Miss Grenfell, the daughter of Lord and Lady Desborough, has been a lady-in-waiting to the queen for many years.

London Policemen to Carry Radio Sets

London, Feb. 26 (INS)—Every London policeman will shortly be supplied with a pocket radio set with a rang of from 5 to 10 miles, according to Scotland Yard.

A special staff is daily engaged at the wireless room of the "Yard" and has practically perfected an apparatus small enough to go in a policeman's pocket, but sufficiently powerful to receive messages at the outskirts of London.

CLEVER COOKS USE SUGAR TO SEASON FOOD

Improves the Taste-appeal and Increases Nourishment of the Dish

There is no need to deny yourself flavor when you eat essential foods. According to leading nutritional authorities and dietitians, the use of sugar to season vegetables, meat dishes and fruits is entirely proper.

Sugar adds zest to essential foods which carry vitamins, mineral salts and roughage. It heightens the "taste" of peas, beans, spinach and other vegetables. It improves the flavor of meat stews and makes them more palatable. In the case of fresh fruits, sugar modifies harsh acids.

In vegetable and meat cookery, a dash of sugar to a pinch of salt is a popular rule of clever cooks. The great value of seasoning and flavoring foods with sugar is that it makes them more enjoyable. Too often essential foods are rejected, especially by children, because they are not pleasing to the taste. Most foods are more delicious with sugar. The Sugar Institute.

SOVIET DROPS RYAZANOV

Moscow, Feb. 26 (AP)—The brief announcement by the Central Executive Committee of the Communist Party today that David Ryazanov "has been dropped as director of the Marx-Engels Institute" indicated that another prominent Communist has joined the ranks of Russian political casualties.

Ryazanov, highly educated and known as "one of the most distinguished theoreticians of Communism," was at one time an adherent of Trotzky, but it was understood he had recanted his views and embraced the policies of Joseph Stalin, head of the party.

There was some surprise that the committee announcement did not prefix the word "Tovarisch," meaning "comrade." Before Ryazanov's name and that it specifically said he had been "dropped" instead of the usual term, "he requested that he be relieved."

Dallas Wants One of Those Detroit White Elephants

Detroit, Feb. 26 (AP)—If a white elephant's egg can be found around the Detroit Zoo, and if it hatches, Dallas, Texas, may add an Albino pachyderm to its zoo.

Jack Lee Baulden of Dallas, a former resident of Detroit, has written to Mayor Frank Murphy of Detroit on the subject.

"I informed my uncle that Detroit had one of these animals (a white elephant)," he wrote, "and he informed me that if such a statement was true, he would buy four or five of these eggs and give them to the city of Dallas."

PAYING COST OF DRY KILLINGS

Washington, Feb. 26—Congress has begun to pay the cost of "shot gun" prohibition enforcement, which has taken a known toll of 1350 lives. The House voted $5000 to the heirs of Jacob D. Hanson, secretary of the Niagara Falls, N. Y., Elks Club, who was shot by coast guardsmen in May, 1928, and died from his wounds August 24, of that year.

The measure, sponsored by Representative Dempsey of the Buffalo district, was passed after Representative Shafer of Wisconsin charged that:

$5000 FIRE TO BE PROBED

Fire of suspicious origin swept a two-story store and office building at 186-192 Massachusetts ave., Back Bay, early today causing a damage of $5000.

The fire started in the basement of a shoe store at 186 Massachusetts ave. and smoke spread through the adjoining stores and also to the second floor, occupied by the New England School of Sign and Poster Art.

The blaze itself was confined for the most part to the shoe store. The art school, on the second floor, although practically untouched by the flames, was heavily damaged by the smoke.

Fiery Haired Stars Are Scarce in Screenland

Statistics compiled by Fred Datig, casting director for Paramount, showed today that of 2660 girls listed at the studios, only 36 are titian haired. Others were classed as follows:

Blondes, 1022; light brown hair, 318; dark brown hair, 421; black hair, 475.

Datig said Joan Crawford, Clara Bow and Janet Gaynor notwithstanding, the proportion of flaming haired actresses among the stars was even smaller.

FRAZER CALLS STADER DEATH 'ACCIDENT'

Raleigh, N. C., Feb. 26 (AP)—Prosecutor A. J. David of Rahway, N. J., announced today that William M. Frazer, charged with the murder of Mrs. Phoebe Stader, had admitted shooting the woman, but claimed it was accidental.

Frazer, the prosecutor said after questioning the man for more than an hour, told of accidentally discharging a rifle, the bullet killing Mrs. Stader. The killing took place in New Jersey and not in New York, Mr. David said.

M. A. Hoey, assistant to the district attorney of Orange county, N. Y., arrived here this morning to ascertain if the killing took place in his county. Frazer and Mrs. Stader were reported to have been seen together in Orange county early on the night she is believed to have been killed.

Mrs. Frazer insists that Mrs. Stader "ruined" her husband.

"I forgave him time after time," she said. "I don't know whether I can stand by him through this."

She described Frazer as a loving, attentive and industrious husband until he inherited $25,000 from his father two years ago. He then quit work, she said, moved into a fine house and turned "playboy." Recently he went "broke" and got a job in a factory.

STUNNED SHABBY HOME

Mrs. Stader's husband was also out of money and out of work. She refused to live in the shabby furnished rooms to which her husband wanted to take her after they had been evicted from an apartment in which they had lived for two years

Poles Demand Probe of Soviet Burglary

Warsaw, Poland, Feb. 26 (AP)—The Polish charge d'affaires at Moscow has delivered to the Soviet government a demand for a thorough investigation of a burglary at the Polish legation on the night of Feb. 16 in which, it is charged, a member of the Soviet secret police was found prowling through the offices in the absence of the Polish minister.

Renewal of Syrian Rebellion Feared

Paris, Feb. 26 (AP)—Reports received here from Egyptian sources today indicated that Soltan Attrach, who led the Druse rebellion in Syria in 1926, is preparing to launch another offensive at the end of March. Official circles in Syria said today that Syria was quiet, Soltan Attrach was exiled after the failure of the 1926 rebellion.

mixture for cement. But it is wasted. Transportation costs too much.

How much does it cost to produce copper? That question can never be answered definitely in America or in the African copper fields. It depends on the quality of your machinery. Mr. Weed has just installed, for Cananea, machinery that cuts down the necessary man power exactly one-half. That is the story everywhere, and civilization must adjust itself to it.

Millions of pounds of molten copper are poured in and out of great metal pots, handled in 500-pound bricks, intensely hot, and six men do all the work. That would surprise the old Cretans that hammered their copper for water pipes out of the ore by hand.

Bad news for the Texaco Oil Co. supplying oil to Cananea. A 12-inch pipe, 550 miles long, is on its way from Texas, bringing natural gas to take the place of fuel oil. It will supply the great smelters at Douglas, Ariz., and then, reduced in size to eight inches, will supply Bisbee, Ariz., and cross the border, to feed Cananea's smelters.

Bad news for Paul Shoup of the Southern Pacific railroad, also, for he will no longer carry the oil. The gas carries itself, by natural expansion, and no Interstate Commerce Commission can protect a railroad against that. However, the Rio Grande valley, in Texas, will soon more than make up for the Southern Pacific loss caused by Texas natural gas. The El Paso Natural Gas Co. says it has a gas supply for 100 years. Mr. Weed's separate investigation assures him that the supply is safe for 50 years at least. It takes an active mind to keep up with United States industrial methods.

If you want exercise, climb in and out of the stopes, and walk through a few miles of underground tunnels in a big copper mine for two or three hours. And to know what real work is, see the miners, "contractors," on their own hook, paid per ton on ore brought out, digging and blasting. An ordinary strong man could not sustain for 15 minutes the effort made by these men, hour after hour. Their labor is the best paid of any in Mexico, and they are happy with work that would seem torture to the soft, average men. Of 1000 men now in the mine, 900 are Mexicans, and they do all the hardest work, unless you call thinking hard work.

Mexicans also are trained, as rapidly as possible, for the "white collar jobs," Mr. Weed says, "I should not like to see in America a plant with all the best jobs going to Mexicans, and I do not want to run in Mexico a plant with the best jobs goin, to Americans, if I can help it."

What is the real value of such a mine as Cananea? No man can know. It controls mountains spread over 400,000 acres, many of them are rich in copper. One of them, that even to the untrained eye is highly mineralized, is soon to have a drill sent down though the top of its head. In that one spot future wealth runs into billions. And American enterprise is useful to our Mexican neighbors. Cananea pays to the Mexican government a million dollars a year, gold.

Again you are advised to come and explore this western country, on both sides of the border. Better fish are in the sea than ever were caught. Better mines are in the earth than have ever been developed. And, under Mexican law, if you discover and claim a mine it is yours, no matter who "owns" the land. The owner has the surface, not what is below, unless he develops it.

Mrs. Pinchot Hits 'Shyster' Lawyers

Harrisburg, Pa., Feb. 26 (AP)—Persons who deluge the office of the Governor for mercy before the electrocution of criminals falsely assume the Governor is unaware of the pitiful nature of the event, Mrs. Gifford Pinchot said today in a radio talk.

In many cases, Mrs. Pinchot said, drives are organized by a "shyster lawyer" who gets a large fee from the unfortunate family by creating exciting hopes that cannot be fulfilled. In the Irene Schroeder case, Mrs. Pinchot said, there was no evidence of such exploitation.

Redingote and Coat Dress Are Smart

By ANN ARDEN

ANN ARDEN will answer questions concerning clothes, social customs or fashions generally. Address your questions to the Boston Evening American or the Boston Sunday Advertiser or to Station WLEX.

IT WOULD be hard to say which is the smarter this spring—the redingote or the coat dress. Of course, both come in the same daytime category, but the various little differences in detailing make them quite individual garments. Perhaps it would be wise to include them both in your first buying plans.

* * *

THE REDINGOTE, which is enjoying an extremely popular revival, is smartest when developed in a dark coat of silk or woolen to be worn over a light colored frock. The new redingotes are caught at the waistline with belt or ingenious design, and then flare open below to show the under dress. Jabots, scarf collars or some similar effect on the bodice show above the waistline.

* * *

THE REDINGOTE frock pictured has a print dress in Vionnet pink, its flower motifs toned Lanvin yellow and Basque blue. There is a group of pleats center front, long sleeves, with puff caught to tight cuff, and a surplice closing, the collar boasting a saw-tooth edge. The redingote of skipper blue flat crepe ties about the hips to sash, its top forming bolero, its three-quarter sleeves obligingly showing the print beneath. The patent leather shoulder flower is skipper blue with white leaves. Chalk white beads are worn; and the gloves are white wash suede, four-button length, with interesting stencil trim in blue kid. The hat is of skipper blue baku braid, with slim, shallow crown and Watteau brim, accented with blue and white feather cluster. The pumps are skipper blue, too, with snake-skin trim.

* * *

* * *

WHETHER YOU are "much on jewelry" or not, news of a new note should be part of your fashion wisdom. Then you may rejoice in recognizing the new as you note it "out and about," and you may subscribe to it or not, as you see fit. The smart initiate to spring jewelry fashion is white jewelry. White in antique ivory, in coral, in bone ivory and in composition is very right at present.

* * *

THERE IS promised to be more than a little glimmer of patent leather in spring fashion affairs. In colors, black or white, you will be wearing it on hats, frocks, in shoes and belts. We have always liked patent leather since childhood days when it made best shoes!

ANN ARDEN broadcasts latest style news over WLEX every Tuesday and Thursday at 10:30 a. m.

RICHARD DIX AND IRENE DUNNE TO BE STARRED IN 'MARCHETA' FILM

'CIMARRON' WON THEM REWARDS

By LOUELLA O. PARSONS
Motion Picture Editor Universal Service

Copyright, 1931, by Universal Service

LOS ANGELES, Feb. 26—The Richard Dix fans all over the country are demanding that Dix be kept in romantic roles. No more comedies for Dix. William Le Baron, who is nothing if not eager to please these Dix followers, is planning to co-star Irene Dunne and Mr. Dix in "Marcheta," based on Victor Schertzinger's song. And Dix will play a colorful bullfighter. That's romantic, isn't it?

I stopped in to call on William Le Baron and he had just received word that John Howard Lawson, well known author, was on his way to Hollywood. Lawson, who is the author of "Bachelor Apartments," will write four originals for Radio Pictures. "Every Girl" and "Daughters of Joy" will go into immediate production.

Louella O. Parsons

Miss Dunne, who leaped right from the unknown class into the headliners in "Cimarron," will play the lead in "Daughters of Joy." She is the chief feminine attraction also in "Honeymoon," also to be directed by Paul Sloane. In fact, keep your eye on Miss Dunne, she is in line for stardom.

* * *

THE STAR IS the thing. We said it last year. We say it this year. RKO-Pathe Company is doing what every company in the industry is doing, building all of its 1931 program around star personalities. Lee Marcus, president of RKO-Pathe, and Charles Rogers, production chief, yesterday announced 21 big star productions in addition to 500 short subjects. The 21 star productions will be specially selected for Constance Bennett, Ann Harding, Bill Boyd, Helen Twelvetrees and Eddie Quillan. Each will make four pictures a year. Counting, that only makes 20. The other star picture will be Ina Claire in "Rebound." Twenty-one star productions, according to my arithmetic.

* * *

YOU NEEDN'T BE surprised to find Dolores Del Rio back on the United Artist lot. Remember Dolores was sick so many months that it became necessary to postpone "The Dove." While plenty of good hard cash was spent getting it ready for production it has never been made. Now Dolores is well again and Samuel Goldwyn, so our informant says, has been discussing a new contract with Miss Del Rio. That will mean that "The Dove" will be put into production this spring.

JUNE COLLYER wearing dark glasses, lunching at the Embassy. CONSTANCE BENNETT convalescing from a bad case of flu. TOM GALLERY and ZASU PITTS dining in the blossom room at the Roosevelt. DOLORES DEL RIO, exquisitely gowned, also there. That's all today. Seeyou tomorrow!

Old Favorite Returns

DOUGLAS FAIRBANKS

OPENING AT Loew's State tomorrow will be "Reaching for the Moon," Douglas Fairbanks' new starring vehicle which he completed just before he left for the Far East.

OPERETTA AT FINE ARTS

"Zwei Herzen im ¾ Takt" ("Two Hearts in Waltz Time"), the first German screen operetta, is to open at the Fine Arts tomorrow. The story—a Viennese musical romance—has to do with a Viennese composer who has written a brilliant waltz song for an operetta under the inspiration of a romance in which he plays the hero's part.

The cast includes many of the outstanding names of the German and Austrian musical comedy, including Gretl Theimer, Irene Eisinger, of the Berlin State Opera, Walter Janssen, German musical comedy star; Willy Forst, called the "Chevalier of Germany"; Oscar Karlweis, Max Reinhardt, comedian, and Paul Morgan and Karl Ettinger, both of whom are now in Hollywood.

RUDOLF GANZ GIVES PIANO RECITAL

By MOSES SMITH

RUDOLPH GANZ, pianist, giving his first Boston concert in many years, was heard last night by a smallish audience that listened with engrossed attention and applauded with marked enthusiasm.

Mr. Ganz played as a master pianist, with the grandeur and dignity associated with the "old school," with musicianship admirably poised and—almost needless to say—with extraordinary command over the mechanism of hammers and wires. His opening number, Busoni's version of the Bach Chaconne, was rendered in noble style, which did not disguise the humanity of the father of music. Perhaps such orchestral voice for the piano offended ears that regard the instrument as purely percussive!

The Haydn Sonata in D major sounded delightfully playful, and exhibited the pianist as a remarkable manipulator of the piano pedals. The romantic ardors and exquisite lyricism of the Chopin B minor Sonata were given full, but not exaggerated, voice by Mr. Ganz. And 12 Preludes of Debussy were played with a beautiful command and variety of tone and color.

The last group of a long program consisted of four Liszt transcriptions of works by Chopin and Paganini.

CHAPLIN EATS SPAGHETTI

Spaghetti, with a side order of scrambled eggs and sausages, proves a laugh-getter in Charlie Chaplin's silent picture, "City Lights," which is at the Tremont, giving continuous performances daily—The Chaplin treatment of spaghetti may stimulate new appetites.

In "City Lights" Chaplin takes his spaghetti oozing in olive oil; not because of any particular flavor that is produced, but for the purpose of adding enjoyment and ease in the consumption. It is difficult to describe properly just what happens, because words are inadequate to hit the pantomime of the subject.

Heifetz the Soloist at Symphony Concerts

Jascha Heifetz will be the soloist at the regular pair of Boston Symphony concerts to be given in Symphony Hall tomorrow afternoon and Saturday evening. He will appear with the orchestra in Beethoven's Violin Concerto which has not been heard at these concerts for several seasons. Dr. Serge Koussevitzky will then introduce a new Symphony of Edward Burlingame Hill.

"CITY LIGHTS." Charlie's latest, is packing them in at the Tremont.

Ruth St. Denis to Give Special Dance Friday

Ruth St. Denis will render her version of the dance of Seven Veils from Oscar Wilde's "Salome" to music by Richard Strauss, at the Boston Opera House tomorrow night. Miss St. Denis joined the Ted Shawn and Denishawn Company for matines and evening performances at Richmond, Va., and a performance tonight in Philadelphia. But four cities will see this dance this season.

'TRADER HORN' STAR BRAVED DANGERS

SHE HAD the distinction, in Nairobi, of sleeping in the bed in which the Prince of Wales slept when he made his first African tour. She was presented a bone idol by the chief of a pygmy tribe. She was even proposed to by a native Sultan. These are some of the adventures of a pretty blonde girl who, just a few weeks before, was leading a peaceful existence in Hollywood, never dreaming of adventure and peril in Africa's jungles.

Edwina Booth, heroine of "Trader Horn," which will open at the Majestic next Sunday evening, was chosen for the role from a large group of blondes who besieged the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer studios for the part.

"I really loved it all," she declares. "We had new adventures every day, and saw new places and new faces. The camps were really comfortable, and I never had the slightest fear after I saw how the guards and hunters could keep the animals away. At first, I didn't like to hear 'em roar at night, but in a couple of days I found that they couldn't get near us. Those African hunters are really wonderful. I never saw anyone so cool in the face of danger."

SCOLLAY PUTS ON GALA NIGHT CLUB SHOW

By JACK GOLDSTEIN

JOHN CAREY, popularly known by New Yorkers as the "Mayor of Harlem," is in Boston to view his Olde Nests Club Show at the Scollay.

Well-groomed and with a grin, famous among thousands night club habitues of the big city, Carey sat in a box while his "boys and girls" did their stuff, to the acclaim of a capacity audience. Shortly after the show got started, he leaned over to a companion and whispered:

"If I could shut off the view of the audience, I would positively imagine myself in my club, and would probably look toward the door anticipating the arrival of some of my custom'rs."

His statement is well founded, insofar as his club has been reproduced on the Scollay stage with realism. The opening scene showing the exterior of the Olde Nest has been carefully built. Carey even saw his doorman, Jim Holloway (brought here especially for the show), escorting guests in evening attire into the portals of this world-famed night spot.

The scene depicting the interior of the club itself, with Lester McCullen, the manager, and "Pop" Sayer, the headwaiter, the entire Chocolate Wafers Band, his large group of entertainers, all brought over from Harlem by Manager Elliston A. Vinson.

Metropolitan

The schedule for the appearances on the Metropolitan stage today of Ted Lewis and his entertainers is as follows: p. m., 1:27, 3:41, 7:27, 9:41.

Mass. Boy is Strongest

"My son, Joseph, suffered with his stomach and bowels until he was quite restless and weak," says Mrs. Anna E. Reagan, 65 Faywood Avenue, Boston.

"Now it's a different story as you can see from his picture. He's strong and full of life. I gave him California Fig Syrup because mother always used it. It increased his appetite, helped him wonderfully. Since then I have used California Fig Syrup myself with benefit for a sluggish liver."

To show how California Fig Syrup acts to build-up and strengthen half-sick, headachy, constipated children through giving tone and strength to weak stomach and bowels, nothing could be more convincing than praise like this.

Your doctor will approve the use of this pure vegetable product—as often as an impure breath, coated tongue, listlessness, feverishness or lack of appetite warn of constipation—or to keep bowels from clogging during colds or children's diseases

When buying, look for the word California on carton and bottle. That marks the genuine.

STUDENTS TOLD TO PREPARE FOR LIFE'S BATTLE

"You can't get all of your education from these profs here a' Tech," said Billy Sunday yesterday at M. I. T. where more than 1000 faculty members and students jammed the main lecture hall to hear him

"There are two kinds of education," he said, "the kind that you may get at school and the kind that you give yourself.

"If you are depending entirely upon the one that you are going to get here you will find yourself stuck as capable of doing something in later life as you would were you a setting hen with crane's legs.

EDUCATION IS DISCIPLINE

"The real purpose of education is to discipline your faculties; otherwise it may only serve to make you a more clever rogue."

The famous evangelist moved his audience to frequent periods of enthusiastic applause. He told of many of his personal experiences as a professional ball player.

"I was the lead-off man for the Chicago Nationals," he said, "and on my first time up I went up to the plate I had a definite plan. I played ballback on Northwestern's football team when I went to college, and the same thing held true there; I was constantly striving towards a definite goal.

"It takes perseverance for such striving, but all the time remember, boys, you're getting ready for the show down to come later in life."

HAPPY CHASING SATAN

Then he told the Technology students how happy he was to be doing the great work of saving souls and chasing the devil

"I've spoken to over 80,000,000 people," he said, "who have been before me and were able to look into my face, and I don't know how many I've spoken to over the radio. And I'm still giving the devil a pretty good run for his money," he added.

Punctuating his addresses with leaps upon chairs, fist shaking, table smiting, and often with hands cupped to his lips he defied skepticism, upheld prohibition and extolled the students of today "not to discount religion."

$30,000 BANK LOOT TOSSED AWAY

A Reporter's Story of the Famous Somersworth, N. H., Bank Murder

THE SOMERSWORTH, N. H., National Bank had been robbed of $60,000. The cashier, Joseph Stickney, was murdered by the intruder. The search was on. The murderer having his loot in bag, broke door glass to escape. Then hurrying to an orchard near by, Joe Kelly dropped his bag of loot for a moment and then went on.

By DAN W. GALLAGHER
(who worked on the case as a reporter)

One of my best sources of news in the long ago was Lieut. John Rosatto, of Police Station I, Hanover st., Boston. One night in April, 1897, I was discussing police affairs with Rosatto when a middle-aged man of grave demeanor entered and asked the lieutenant if the $50,000 in cash had been recovered.

"Fifty thousand dollars, did you say?"

"Yes, $50,000."

Rosatto pulled himself together and asked the visitor for his name and address

"I cannot tell you my name or address; never mind about the $50,000," said the man.

BANK CASHIER SLAIN

The lieutenant suggested he had better inform police headquarters of his loss. The stranger departed. Rosatto got busy. It was learned that the man had been seen in Tremont Row. The night clerk of a certain hotel said that for the last two weeks a man named J. H. McCormick had been among its guests. He also stated that after McCormick had checked out he had telephoned the hotel, saying he had lost $46,000. And that since that time nothing had been seen of him.

I never learned whether or not McCormick recovered his money or what became of him. For, after quitting Rosatto and turning in that story, word came that Cashier Joseph Stickney, of the Somersworth, N. H., National Bank had been slain and that, in addition to that murder, the bank had been robbed of $60,000. Orders were given me to proceed to Somersworth. Upon reaching that city the chief of police told me the following story of the crime

"All we know is that Cashier Stickney was alone in the bank when someone entered, killed him and made off with the money. Stickney's assistant, a Miss Beckwith, had gone to lunch. Just before the discovery of the body, a man was seen to emerge from the bank. He appeared to be about 30 years of age, had a black mustache and was carrying a white cloth sack that bulged. He went up the hill behind the bank building and that was the last seen of him. Come with me and I'll let you have a look at the interior of the bank."

On our way to the scene of the crime we were joined by three of New England's best known reporters, John W. Carberry, Elias McQuaid and Forrest Hull. We found that the banking rooms were on the second floor of the building, reached by a flight of narrow stairs. The door at the head of the stairs, leading into the bank, originally had a large square of plate glass in it. This glass had been shattered.

GLASS SHATTERED

"Who broke this glass?" Hull asked.

"The murderer did it," said the chief. "After he entered and killed Cashier Stickney by stabbing his throat, he must have got hold of the cashier's keys, locked this door and pulled down the curtain. Then, instead of leaving the key in the door he withdrew it. Thus, after getting the money from the vault and putting it in his cloth sack, he couldn't find the right key quick enough when he returned to this door. So he shattered the glass with the money sack, climbed through and proceeded to the street, I haven't the slightest clue to his identity. He seems to have been some stranger. Lots of people saw him as he strode off up the hill. But not one has the faintest inkling as to his identity."

Upon quitting the bank, the four of us made a house-to-house canvass at the top of the hill the stranger had climbed. And produced results. A woman resident up there told us:

"The only person I saw come up the hill was a young man named Joe Kelly. He was carrying something in a sack slung over his shoulder."

"He went right by here, then turned into that orchard over yonder and put his bundle down near that big apple tree (pointing). I thought he was taking a short cut and paid no further attention to him."

Hull asked her what she knew about Kelly.

"He was born and brought up here in Somersworth," she said, "His parents are dead. He's worked here and there around Somersworth and over in North Berwick, Maine, which is just across the river."

"Was he wearing a mustache when he went by here?"

"No, he doesn't wear a mustache; he's smooth shaven."

We found no sack at the foot of that apple tree. And it didn't take us long to discover that Kelly, who had been rooming in North Berwick, had called at his home the day of the murder, obtained two suitcases and departed. His landlady informed us that for two weeks Kelly had been engaged in "some kind of work for himself" in a room he had hired on the third floor of a building in the main street of Somersworth.

"You'll probably find him up there now," she said. "It's just across the street from the bank where poor Mr. Stickney was killed. It's nothing new for Joe to stay away two or three days running. He told me he's working on an invention and that sometimes he stays up all night in that room in Somersworth so that he can get it completed and patented."

"If that is the case what need he had he for those suitcases?"

"Well, all I know is what he told me. And that was that he meant to use them to put materials in—some of the things that entered into the invention he's working on."

TRACED BY POLICE

Meanwhile the chief of police had been busy on his own hook. A North Berwick livery stable proprietor informed him that Kelly, with two suitcases, had been driven over to Rochester, N. H., by him where he had boarded a train for Montreal. Authorities of the Canadian city were asked to arrest him on sight.

We had no trouble in finding the room Kelly had hired in Somersworth. From its windows one could glimpse everything going on in the bank on the second floor of the building across the street. Thus, its occupant was able to spot the activities of Stickney and Miss Beckwith, map out his program and await the time when the cashier would be alone in the bank. We also found he had put in considerable time writing note after note that read as follows

"Mr. Stickney:

"Charles Jeffries,

TRAPPED AS WOMAN

They trapped Kelly, murderer of Cashier Stickney, up at Montreal. When they got him, he was attired as a woman. The postmaster of North Berwick, when shown one of the orders for stamps found in Kelly's room, declared his name had been forged. Following his arrest, Kelly admitted he had written all the orders for stamps we had come upon. He said that after a lot of practice he had turned out one he felt would fool Stickney and so it proved. When Stickney went into the vault to get the stamps, Kelly, according to his confession, kicked open a latticed gate. The cashier, hearing the commotion, rushed out at this point, only to be attacked and killed. The weapon used was a "razor."

(How slayer Kelly tossed $20,000 out of a car window, and what became of the money, will be told in tomorrow's story.)

LOVE-SMITTEN YOUTH SMILES AT FINES

"I was arrested while on my way to file my marriage intentions," Nicholas Di Pena, of Somerville, informed Judge Elbridge G. Davis in Malden District Court late yesterday, when arraigned on a charge of operating his auto without a license on complaint of Medford police

Di Pena told police he was going to marry a Medford girl, but he refused to give her name

When police searched Di Pena's auto they found a quantity of "nigger" pool tickets, it was said and an additional charge of having lottery tickets was placed against him. He was fined $15 for the operating charge and $50 for having the lottery tickets Judge Davis asked Di Pena where he obtained the lottery tickets, but Di Pena only smiled in answer.

"It costs a lot to get married, but it's worth it," he declared as he settled his fine with Probation Officer William J. Kelley

DADDY OF THE YD

An Intimate Story of the Life of General Clarence R. Edwards

By HARRY A. BENWELL

On November 10, 1917, General Edwards returned from the British front and rejoined his division, to find the men suffering from lack of proper clothing, fuel and equipment.

The 101st Engineers had been detached for service elsewhere, and infantrymen were digging sewers and drains when they should have been engaged in learning warfare.

The general stepped into the breach and in a short time there was food and clothing in plenty, together with fuel, but the division suffered at all times from lack of trucks.

Under the handicap of many working details, training was carried on under the supervision of the French, who wanted to concentrate on trench warfare. General Edwards differed with them, maintaining that the traditional weapon of the American soldier was the rifle and bayonet, and succeeded in having his way.

The division celebrated its first Christmas abroad in the training area, and the days drew on into January with the general steadily building up the morale of the men.

Presents Colors
Monotony of Training Is at Last Broken on Sunday

He passed among them constantly, regardless of weather conditions, exhibiting understanding and praising, calling the men by their names and manifesting an intense personal interest in their welfare.

Methods of fighting he had witnessed on the British front he described to the troops, and inculcated in them the belief that they were fully capable of defeating any given number of the enemy. He insisted on discipline, particularly stressing the salute which he declared was the manifestation of a man's self-respect, but at the same time was always fair. No officer ever took advantage of his position more than once if the general knew it.

On the last Sunday in January he made review of training and his eye on when Gen. Edwards presented a stand of colors to the 101st Infantry. The colors were sent by Governor Samuel W. McCall in behalf of the people of Massachusetts and were accepted by Col. Edward L. Logan.

A short time later Gen. Edwards was summoned to general headquarters, where he was informed the French high command had persuaded Gen. Pershing to permit two battalions of the Yankee Division to go up to the Chemin des Dames front.

Goes Into Service
Whole of 26th Sent With Eleventh French Corps

Asked if he would permit the battalions to go up, Gen Edwards replied

"I want every man of the 26th Division and I will take them all up to the Chemin des Dames."

Although he was told that his troops had not received sufficient training, the general knew his men, and replied

"Let them go up."

As a result the division was assigned to the Eleventh French Corps under Gen. de Maud'Huy, part of Gen. Duchesne's army.

The movement was executed successfully, and the division entered the line on Feb. 5, for the first time being concentrated with every unit.

That afternoon the guns of Battery A of the 101st Field Artillery went into action, the shell case of the first shot later being sent home to repose in a prominent position in the State House.

In order to identify the new troops the enemy sent over raiding parties preceded by barrages, but the New Englanders, although under fire for the first time, repulsed the attacks and made a number of prisoners.

The division was in the Chemin des Dames sector for six weeks, during which time General Edwards continued his custom of visiting the men and watching over their welfare.

First Night Patrol
French General Praises Yankee Division for Valor

Numerous raids were beaten off and on St. Valentine's Day the Americans were permitted to go on a night patrol with French troops. They acquitted themselves so well that the general was showered with compliments by the French and several of his men won the Croix de Guerre, while others got the Distinguished Service Crosses and Medals.

In the latter part of February Gen. de Maud'Huy complimented the Yankees for the manner in which they used rifles in raids. He said the French had forgotten how to use the rifle and must learn again, having been given a lesson by the Americans.

He wrote another letter of praise for the manner in which the Yankee machine gunners helped lay down a box barrage by indirect fire. This was the first time that machine guns had been used in co-operation with artillery in this manner, and the French general was much pleased.

On March 15, when the 26th Division was ordered to move to the Bar-sur-Aube area, having completed its front line training much more rapidly than was expected, Gen. de Maud'Huy issued a general order which read:

"We regret that our comrades of the 26th Division should leave us in order to fulfill their task elsewhere. We have been able to appreciate their bravery, their sense of duty and discipline, also their frank comradeship; they carry away our unanimous regrets. Gen. Edwards has been pleased to consider the 11th Corps as godfather of the 26th Division; the 11th Corps feels proud of the awarded honor, being sure that, wherever he may be sent, the godson shall be credit to the godfather!"

The next instalment of the life of Gen. Edwards, dealing with victories to which he led the 26th Division, will appear in the Boston Evening American tomorrow.

SUICIDE DUG HIS OWN GRAVE

Hartford, Feb. 26 (AP) — Despondency was blamed today by police for the death of Felix Grezieno, 59, who committed suicide yesterday near his isolated home after digging his own grave.

A neighbor, investigating the report of a gun, found Grezieno's body lying near the shallow grave, which had been freshly dug. At the head of the grave was a crude cross to which had been affixed a religious picture bearing the words "Glory to God in the Highest."

BLOCK'S OFFER FOR N. Y. WORLD IS WITHDRAWN

His made his announcement through Max D. Steuer, his attorney, who explained that Mr. Block not only had decided not to purchase the newspapers for himself but also to withdraw the offer he made to buy them and allow the employes of the Worlds 45 days within which to purchase them without profit to himself.

Surrogate James A. Foley will decide today whether the will of Joseph Pulitzer may be broken to allow the sale of the newspapers. The withdrawal of Mr. Block means that the employes who have made a bid for The Worlds must arrange their financing without his assistance.

DID NOT KNOW OF CONTRACT

"When Mr. Block made an offer for the purchase of the Worlds he was on the coast and he knew nothing of what had here transpired since December between Roy Howard and the Messrs. Pulitzer," Mr. Steuer said.

"Nor did he learn anything concerning it until last evening. He has now ascertained that Mr. Howard had concluded a contract with the trustees of the Pulitzer estate and he does not want to be put in the position of having interfered for the purpose of breaking up an existing contract.

WILL NOT INTERFERE

"He is also moved by the plea on behalf of the employes. He would not make a move to deprive them of the opportunity of getting these papers. On the contrary he had announced publicly that if he did purchase them he would give the employes 45 days within which to make arrangements to take papers over without one cent of profit to him or even reimbursing him for his counsel fees and other disbursements."

Gustave B. Rogers counsel for the World employes announced when he heard of Mr. Block's withdrawal that it was "the result of an agreement between Mr. Howard and Mr. Block."

BEBE DANIELS BARES SCREEN SECRETS

Los Angeles, Feb. 26 (US)—Bebe Daniels once told Harold Lloyd that some day he would make $150 a week. Harold never thought he would live to see the day. He believed that Mary Pickford might earn that much, but no one would be crazy enough to pay such a staggering salary to a comedian.

Radio listeners throughout the nation tuned in on the Sunkist broadcast yesterday, chuckled frequently at the reminiscences of the old, golden days of motion pictures from Miss Daniels and Louella Parsons, motion picture editor of the Hearst newspapers and Universal Service.

"You were right again, Bebe, about Harold earning so much money," said Miss Parsons.

"I certainly thought so," answered Miss Daniels, "when he showed me through his million dollar estate last week."

Miss Daniels revealed that the beach doing slap stick pictures when she was Harold Lloyd's leading lady. If a girl couldn't do the stunts required, she didn't get the job. Doubles were unknown. In those days she was getting $30 a week, and Harold earned $50. They both thought they were overpaid.

"From all I hear about the breakfast you cooked for him, I am sure your place is in the studio and not in the kitchen," said Miss Parsons.

"Did Ben Lyon tell you I couldn't cook?" Miss Daniels asked with a great show of indignation. "I can cook Sunkist orange juice pretty well. What about your own cooking? You're always boasting about it."

According to an announcement from Miss Parsons, an interview with Constance Bennett will be broadcast next Wednesday.

Thought of Facing Shaw Put Charlie Running

London, Feb. 26 (AP)—Ten years ago Charlie Chaplin mourned George Bernard Shaw's doorstep, lost his courage, turned tail and ran.

Today he disclosed that he had confessed that misadventure to Shaw. It was while he waited to ring Shaw's doorbell, he said, that a boy with an autograph book in his hand followed him up the steps. Chaplin turned quickly and the boy ran. In a moment Charlie was going after him.

"Why did you run away?" Shaw demanded.

"Purely a case of follow the leader," said Chaplin.

TOBACCO RULED A NECESSITY

Indianapolis, Ind., Feb. 26 (INS)—The House of Representatives today had further muddled its shifting outlook on the social and moral problems of Indiana and the 20th century by apparently deciding that tobacco is a necessity instead of a luxury. This decision was registered when the House voted 50 to 42 to indefinitely postpone a bill to impose a 10 per cent tax upon all tobacco products.

The measure was killed over the protests of representatives who asserted that "tobacco is a luxury and those who can't or don't want to pay the tax can quit smoking."

Destroyer Wilkes Is Sent to Boston

New London, Ct., Feb. 26 (INS)—Transfer of the coast guard destroyer Cummings to Division 2, in New York, and the destroyer Wilkes to Division 3 in Boston on April 1, was announced today.

'Mousetrap' Finkel Tells Colimo That Franks' Gang Is There—Battle Ensues

"SLAUGHTERHOUSE" WAITS at the "Mousetrap" while Franks tries to sell the truck load of beer to Finkel.

How the Story Started

Louie Scorpio, called "Slaughterhouse," champion steer killer of the stockyards and winner of the revolver prize at the butchers' annual picnic, decided to join the bootleg racket run by Johnny Franks. His decision was clinched by the frame-up appearance at Franks' cafe of "Peaches," a beauty of the underworld. He demanded a "rod" and became a member. His inspection of the alcohol plant in a nearby cellar was interrupted by the scream of a police wagon's siren. The door was battered down and the "Cooker" Vronski arrested. Franks decides to invade the territory of his rival gangster, Colimo, with a load of beer.

CHAPTER 6

"The Raid"

ANOTHER TAXI was following Hank.

"Shake the guy following us," he instructed the driver. The man, with a nod, suddenly turned the car into a narrow alley. Then he snapped out the car's lights.

The other taxi roared by.

In it, as Hank had suspected, was Carl.

Carl's car whirled around the next corner, picked up the trail of another taxi and went on. Hank's car emerged from the alley. Ahead, they could still see the red tail lights of the Franks machine.

"Stick on their tail," instructed the reporter.

Dangerous

"Joe Colimo," Franks instructed his men, as the car hurried toward Finkel's, "is dangerous as hell. He's a fine-looking guy, a swell dresser—and highbrow. Plays wop opera on the piano. Dresses like a movie actor. Reads poetry. Writes it, too. But that don't mean he wouldn't have a guy bumped off as soon as look at him."

"He may be tough, but he's got one weak spot—his kid brother, Ivan," supplemented the Gouger. "He sent the kid to college, and won't let him mix up in the racket. Some day that soft spot will trip him up."

The car drew to the curb with a squeal of brakes.

They faced the doorway of a dingy resort, windows shuttered and dark to the street. Dirt hung thick on its walls. Here was "The Mousetrap," the speakeasy of "Mousetrap" Finkel.

Truck at Door

Franks looked around quickly.

"Bunch up as we go in," he ordered. "Don't do nothing rash! I give you the eye. But—always be ready to reach with your rods."

"Mousetrap" Finkel, a little man, looking enough like the rodent family to warrant his nickname, shivered in an ecstacy of fear.

"Glad to see you, boys—always glad to see you—" he muttered uneasily, as he seated his visitors. The waiter brought beer—for all but Scorpio, who called for milk. "And not skimmed, you greaseball," Finkel hovered over the table like a chattering monkey. Frank was smiling as he raised the glass to his lips.

"But I haven't got a grand, Mr. Johnny Franks."

"Get it!"

Finkel moaned and protested. He murmured that he'd "look in his cash register." He scurried to his office behind the kitchen, where he rang Colimo on the phone.

"Joe!" he whispered, "Johnny Franks and his mob are here, shaking me down for a truck load of beer."

"Stall him along—we'll be over," was the answer.

Colimo, in the quiet, charming apartment over his big restaurant, dropped the telephone and with a sigh returned to the piano.

He had been playing a Chopin prelude. Interruption irritated him. He smiled at a tall, dark youth, his brother, Ivan, back on vacation from college, and fairly aching to take a hand in the racket.

Brother Pleads

Joe Colimo was the "Big Shot" of gangland in the city, and that Franks should have the temerity to "muscle in" seemed to irritate, rather than really alarm him. He pressed a button in his desk, and four men entered, led by a slim, dark Italian, in the buttonhole of whose well-tailored suit was a fresh gardenia. Mozzo always wore one. Hence, in the gang world, he was known as "Gardenia."

Colimo dropped onto the piano bench and his fingers found the strange melancholy chords as he talked quietly and smiled. When Joe Colimo smiled, even his gang was afraid of him.

"Franks and his mob are at Finkel's muscling in. They have

PENITENTS HIT 'TRAIL' IN TEMPLE

Evangelist's Sermon on 23d Psalm Proves Drawing Card

Billy Sunday shamed the devil today, when he persuaded scores to hit the sawdust trail in Tremont Temple with his sermon on the Twenty-third Psalm.

"This Psalm has charmed more drunkards away from their cups, gamblers from their cards and caused more infidels to pray than any similar portion of the Bible," the evangelist declared.

"Heaven is a place, not a state. The penitentiary is a place, not a condition. There must be a place for the resurrected body, and Jesus went to prepare that place. Bodily He rose and bodily He will return."

He stressed the importance of individual choice, saying that entering the Heavenly gates is a matter of choice, and concluded:

"You can curse if you wish, I choose to pray; you can be drunk if you wish, I choose to be sober. You can go to Heaven if you choose."

CARPET TACKS IN HUBBY'S BED

James Moore of 67 Tudor st., Lynn, complained to the Lynn police today that his wife, Eva, 25, had left him and taken the furniture from their home with her.

The only thing left in the house was a bed. When Moore tried to sleep in it last night he said he found it literally a bed of pain for his wife had sprinkled the sheets liberally with carpet tacks.

Moore, in spite of his belief that insult was added to injury, was told that there was nothing that the police could do in the matter.

Fair Weather to Last Another Day

Boston escaped a deluge of rain today when the storm central over Georgia yesterday and headed this way swung out to sea toward Bermuda. The cloudy condition prevailing in Boston was caused by that storm. The unofficial forecast for Boston and vicinity is "Fair tonight and tomorrow; not much change in temperature; moderate northeast to northwest winds."

At 9 a. m. today the official temperature in Boston was 34 and the wind was blowing eight miles an hour from northwest. The minimum temperature during the night here was 31. The maximum yesterday in Boston was 44.

Man Suicide Off Boston Bound Boat

Police and officials of the Eastern Steamship Lines are endeavoring to ascertain the identity of the man, known only as J. Targen, who plunged overboard from the steamer Robert E. Lee yesterday when she was off the harbor entrance on her trip from New York.

The suicide followed a sleepless night, during which the man gave himself up to despondency. Ship attendants observed him several times during the night, sitting beside his bunk, his head in his hands.

CAPTOR FAINTS AS RODENT SNAPS

Bystanders Pry Jaws of Squirrel Apart; Cecere Treated at Hospital

Traffic at Tremont and Boylston sts. was blocked in all directions for a quarter of an hour today when a squirrel astray in the traffic but his would-be rescuer so severely that he fainted in the middle of the street.

Albert Cecere, 26, of 79 Prince st., North End, went to the animal's aid when it seemed in dire peril of being killed by an automobile. The frightened squirrel sank his teeth into Cecere's hand and Cecere fell to the pavement in a faint.

At the Haymarket Relief hospital, where Cecere was sent in a taxicab for treatment, he said:

"I saw the squirrel in the middle of the highway dodging in and out among the automobiles. I thought he would be killed so I rushed into the street to save him.

"He must have thought I was going to hurt him, as he sank his teeth into one of my fingers the instant I picked him up. The pain was so intense I fainted. Later I learned that a woman and a man came to my rescue and pried the squirrel's jaw apart, loosing his hold."

The would be rescuer's finger was treated while frantic policemen were desperately unraveling the traffic knot.

Dog Is Killed Under Train Saving Life of Canine 'Pal'

Canine "heroism" cost a huge black spaniel his life today before hundreds of commuters at the Roslindale railroad station.

With a small brown terrier, the spaniel arrived, as was his usual morning custom, to send the 8:17 on its way to Boston with workers.

The terrier wandered on to the tracks as the train thundered into the station and its companion barked frantically before running on to the track to nip the hind legs and put it to flight.

But he was too late to escape himself. The cowcatcher struck him, killing him almost instantly. The terrier companion was uninjured.

Lenten Prayer

Home-Town Folks

Jesus went back to his home town, apparently after a long absence. He went to church, and was given an opportunity to preach. His old neighbors were not proud of him. They resented his presumption in going beyond them. How foolish people are that way! As though the home town had no title or right to excellence! It is so in many a small town, which depreciates its own product. Then Jesus preached a missionary sermon, and the people were offended at that. They were 100 per cent patriotic, and were angered when Jesus told them that God cared for foreigners. What foolish egotists we are on the subject of race and nation! We assume that we are the chosen people. The home-town mind is provincial. The field is the world.

PRAYER: O God, who hast made of one blood all nations, make broad our human sympathies, and make deep our Christian charity. And make us sensible, we beseech thee, of thine anointing when it rests on familiar heads. In Jesus' name. Amen.

APRIL FOOL'S DAY ELOPEMENT ENDS IN COURT

BANDIT VICTIM, HERO DOG AND LYNN SUSPECT

FRED E. HAINES, JR., lost $25 when held up by bandit in his filling station, but saved his dog, Queenie, that grabbed the bandit. The holdup man threatened to shoot the dog and Haines succeeded in getting his pet out of danger.

WILLIAM J. KENNEY was held in $10,000 in Lynn court after confessing to police that he had held up Haines. Police are trying to connect him with the fatal shooting of Louis Bagni in a Somerville filling station Tuesday night. (Staff photos.)

COURT ANNULS MARRIAGE OF TWO YEARS

Rules Divorce of Auto Salesman From Wife No. 1 Was Not Absolute at Time

An April Fool's Day elopement of two years ago landed with a thud in Suffolk probate court today, the one time romance ending on the rocks of annulment.

It was a romance of an auto salesman and a bookkeeper with Frederick Williams, of Brainerd rd., Allston, and Virginia Lapworth, of Hopedale, the principals.

A previous divorce of Williams' first wife had not become absolute, the court decreed.

"We met in February 1929 at my aunt's house in Allston when he came to sell my aunt a car," the young second wife testified.

"He told me he was divorced in Florida four years before and on April 1 we went to Nashua, N. H., and were married.

"On April Fool's Day" Judge Frost queried.

"Yes, it was April Fool's Day," she replied.

"Why did you leave him," the court asked.

"Last September, I think it was the time of the big parade in Boston, he left me for two days and I had only 75 cents," she testified. They then lived on Gardner st., Allston, she said.

Williams appeared and admitted a record the court produced that showed he was divorced by Elaine Crowley Williams, now of Warren st., Roxbury, on Dec. 11, 1924.

In Love Tangle

NAMES TO STAY ON BALLOT

The petitions brought by Gerald K. Richardson of Winchester for a writ of mandamus to compel Mabel V. Stinson, clerk of that town, to omit from the ballot at the annual meetings to be held March 2, the names of J. Harper Blaisdell, William P. Callahan, Vincent P. Clark, Thomas F. Fallon, Harris S. Richardson, Henry W. Stevens and Irving L. Symes as candidates for Selectmen of Winchester, were dismissed by Judge William C. Wait of the Supreme Judicial Court.

The petitions also sought to compel the clerk to omit from the ballot the designations, "former Selectman," "for re-election," and a "member of the Finance Commission," after the names of the candidates.

DOGS FIGURE IN HOLDUP TRIAL

Two dogs, one of them dead, will play a prominent part in the trial of William J. Kenney, 20, of Highland ave., Lynn, who was held in $10,000 bail in Lynn court today for a hearing March 3 on a charge of robbery while armed.

Kenney was held after police said he confessed to holding up and robbing Frederick E. Haines, Jr., Lynn filling station proprietor, 24 hours after Louis Bagni was shot to death in a Somerville filling station holdup.

Police are trying to connect Kenney with the Bagni shooting.

In both instances the robber appeared under the influence of drugs, and in each case a dog went to the aid of its master in the filling station.

Bagni's German shepherd dog was slain, but Haines saved his Irish terrier, Queenie, after she had attacked the holdup man.

Haines was robbed of $25 and later identified Kenney's photograph and the youth on being arrested, confessed.

Woman Has Job, Now She Needs Alarm Clock

A request for an alarm clock was the novel application made today to the Massachusetts Welfare Chest, conducted under the auspices of the women's subcommittee of the Massachusetts emergency committee on unemployment.

The application came from a woman who said she has secured a position after a long search and she fears she may oversleep and thus place her new position in jeopardy.

COUPLES HELD AFTER CHASE

Arrested by Malden and Somerville police after a long chase which ended in Massachusetts ave. at Cogswell st., Cambridge, two young couples pleaded not guilty to charges of drunkenness before Judge Elbridge G. Davis in Malden District Court and trial of their cases will be held on March 6.

The two girls gave the names of Lena M. Lacallaide, 18, of School st., Everett, and May Boyan, 19, of Alexander st., Dorchester. Their boy friends were booked as George J. Peck of Bellevue ave., Cambridge, and Leonard Thimot of Summer st., Somerville.

A dozen shots were fired but no attention was paid to them, police say, and the car was, finally overhauled in Cambridge. Asked why they failed to stop, the prisoners said they thought the police were bandits trying to hold them up.

HURLED GLASS, WIFE CHARGES

Charles C. MacMahon, real estate salesman, was a model husband for six months and then . . .

"He slapped my face. He threw a glass at me. He hurled me against the wall. His mother paid the rent and supported him."

His wife, Alice G MacMahon of Trapelo rd., Waltham, so testified today in Middlesex court in a suit for divorce, custody of a two-year-old girl and separate support.

MacMahon, who said he was living with a friend in Beacon st., Brookline, testified he was willing to support his wife, but was out of work.

Under cross-examination, he admitted that he recently bought liquor and attended a party where much liquor was consumed.

Judge Leggat granted temporary custody of the child to Mrs. MacMahon and took the case under advisement.

Speeds for a Mile and Isn't Satisfied

After a mile chase on the Stoughton-Canton highway, Clement J. Melanae of Massachusetts ave., Arlington, riding in a sedan, was captured at gunpoint by a Stoughton police officer today with 29 bags of alleged liquor.

Patrolman Duncan R. Fleming sighted the sedan heading for Boston while he was "cruising" in the Stoughton police car. He said the driver failed to heed his signal to stop.

Peter Was Winner, but Not This Peter

Peter Franklin of North Shore rd., Revere, who was informed last Friday that he was the winner of $9611.96 in the Canadian Army and Navy Veterans' Sweepstakes, is a sadder and wiser man today.

Upon learning of his "good fortune," Franklin turned his ticket over to his attorney, David Faber, of 301 Tremont st. AUTO INSURANCE 20 PER CENT CHEAPER BY GOODWIN PLAN

EX-REGISTRAR URGES STATE COMPANY

Appears at a Hearing in Support of a Bill to Lower Costs to Motorists

Compulsory automobile insurance could be furnished the motorists of Massachusetts at from 18 to 20 per cent less than at present if acquisition costs and profits were eliminated, according to Frank A. Goodwin, chairman of the Boston Finance Commission, who spoke today before the joint legislative committee on insurance.

The former registrar of motor vehicles addressed the committee in favor of a bill fathered by him and former Representative Martin Hays calling for creation of Massachusetts Automobile Insurance Co., to cover personal injury, property and fire damage and theft.

Under terms of the Goodwin-Hays bill three directors for the proposed company would be appointed by the State Department of Public Works with approval of the Governor and Council. The State would advance a certain sum of money to start the company, which would later repay.

"The state compels motorists to insure against injury to persons and it, therefore, should see that motorists get their insurance as low a price as possible," said Mr. Goodwin. "I would prefer a monopolistic state fund, but the Supreme Court knocked that proposition out with a decision that it would be unconstitutional."

Goodwin criticised the Supreme Court for its attitude on a state fund, although upholding the payment of dividends to Elevated stockholders from the people's pockets.

RELIEF FUND IS $287,675

Contributions amounting to $2149.05 were received Monday and Tuesday by the Boston Metropolitan Chapter of the American Red Cross, 347 Commonwealth ave., toward their quota of the drouth relief fund.

This, together with amounts hitherto received, carries the Chapter total to $287,675.84, it was announced today.

The latest advice from Red Cross headquarters at Washington shows that contributions from all over the country have gone beyond the $3,000,000 mark. Red Cross officials feel confident that with continued co-operation from Chapters throughout the country we should not fail to reach our $10,000,000 quota within a short time.

TOT BREAKS LEG FOURTH TIME

Apparently philosophical in her role as the ward's best customer, she smiled obligingly for the photographer when he interrupted her perusal of the funny papers.

In January, 1930, Elizabeth tripped over a gas pipe and started her leg-breaking career. Next she fell off a chair and broke the left leg again. Last Christmas she broke it for the third time when she fell while pushing her new doll carriage.

Last night, after a brief vacation from her hospital cot, she fell off a chair in the kitchen and today is back again with the familiar splints in place.

SUSPECT HELD IN SHOOTING OF POLICEMAN

Youth Captured in Roxbury Long Sought for Wounding of Brighton Officer

A youth, captured in Roxbury last night as a burglar suspect while his "phantom" companion escaped through a police vigil of three days, was identified today as John Kalas, alias John Kolis, wanted in Brighton on a charge of attempted murder of a Brighton policeman last summer.

Kalas was captured in a vacant Lenox house by police of the Roxbury Crossing station. The companion escaped with a set of safe-blowing equipment.

Inspector James R. Claflin, fingerprint expert, uncovered the identity and Kalas admitted it immediately.

According to the charges in a warrant held by Brighton police, Kalas was involved in the shooting of Patrolman Owen F. Donovan of Brighton after the latter questioned five youths in an automobile last July.

Donovan hovered between life and death for several weeks in St. Elizabeth's Hospital after the shooting.

He reported his find to Capt. Mullen and two officers were assigned to keep vigil there. Their efforts were unrewarded until last night.

Liquor Hidden Near Kennel; 2 Men Held

How dry agents discovered 27 gallons of alcohol and 30 pints of assorted liquor hidden in shrubbery back of a dog kennel in East st., Dedham, was told to Commissioner Edwin C. Jenney in federal court today when William Smith, keeper of the kennel, was arraigned on the charge of violating the prohibition act.

The kennel is the property of James H. Murphy of Dedham. He and Smith pleaded not guilty and were held each in $1000.

'Flu' Cases Missing for Second Day

Deputy Health Commissioner Joseph Monahan announced today that this is the second day this week that no cases of influenza has been reported to the health department. This bears out his hope that all danger of a flu epidemic is past.

Mrs. Mary Pryor's Show Dog Vanishes

Mrs. Mary E. Pryor, mother of L. C. Pryor, proprietor of Hotel Lenox, today reported to police that her female Scotch collie Juana disappeared from the dog show and was not returned to her last night when the show closed. The dog, a parti-colored sable and white, of valuable breed, was wearing a collar. Mrs. Pryor told police the collie may have slipped her leash at the show, or may have been stolen. Mrs. Pryor offers a liberal reward for return of her pet.

MAN WANTED IN IRELAND HELD FOR HEARING

Free State Consular Agent Asks U. S. Commissioner for Extradition Papers

For the first time since the Irish Free State was established, its representatives appeared today before a United States court to ask its aid in returning Ireland a fugitive from justice.

P. Galway Foley, consular agent of the Free State government, with former Congressman Joseph F. O'Connell as his counsel, appeared before United States Commissioner Edwin C. Jenney, seeking extradition papers for William J. Clifford, formerly of Tralee, Ireland, charged with embezzlement from the Free State.

Clifford, according to Foley, is a former employe of the inland revenue department of the Free State, and fled Ireland in 1929 with money he had collected in the course of his duties. The specific charge against Clifford is the embezzlement of $600, but Foley said Irish officials believe the amount of his defalcations is considerably higher than that figure.

Clifford asked a continuance to permit of the attendance of his counsel, Charles Douglas, who was engaged in other legal affairs at the moment. The hearing was to be held late today or tomorrow morning.

Clifford told the court he had a relative in Somerville who would furnish bail for him. Congressman O'Connell objected to his admission to bail on the ground he was in America illegally.

Clifford was placed in the custody today of Deputy U. S. Marshal James Tighe pending the hearing.

$50 Weekly for News and Picture Tips

Do you want to get money for being alert? If so, the Boston Evening American offers the opportunity. Each week $50 in prizes will be given for news and picture tips telephoned in to the News-Tip Editor, at Liberty 4000.

What is a news tip? It's the information that something of interest to Greater Bostonians has taken place or will take place. Do you know, for instance, that an interesting picture is to be obtained, that an accident or an unusual event has happened, that there is going to be a business merger? That's a news tip.

If you have a camera, take a picture of some news event, while it is happening. Bring your action pictures to the American quick. Delay often spoils them for use.

There will be $15 given weekly for the best or the most unusual event news tip received; $10 for the next best; $5 for the next best, and $2 prizes for each of the 10 next most valuable tips.

Life's Last Edition Has Gone to Press for Robert Gillis.

NO VACANT CHAIR: MACHINE RUMBLES ON

THERE WILL be no vacant chair, for in the newspaper game one cog goes out, one cog goes in, and the big machine rumbles on. But nevertheless as we of the sporting department look over to the news desk we will miss a smiling, quiet face and tense, bent figure, blue pencsling here, writing in there, changing this head, remaking that page, doing the thousand and one duties that fell before him an edition after edition rolled off the press, and doing the duties well.

ROBERT GILLIS.

Life's last edition has gone to press for Bob Gillis. They paid him the last solemn tribute in a requiem mass in St Mary's church in Brookline this morning, and now all that is mortal of Bob Gilis sleeps the last sleep in Evergreen cemetery, Chestnut Hill. Bob, old man—

"Green be the turf above thee, friend of our better days, None knew thee but to love thee, none named thee but to praise."

The ground is cold but the snow lays in a white coverlet over the grave and soon spring will come and the grass will grow green and the birds will sing, as the birds always were singing in the heart of Bob Gillis, as lovable, as genial, as kindly a soul as ever sat in the slot and held down the desk in a newspaper.

How we of the office staff will remember Bob Gillis is voiced by Shorty, the office boy, who says:

"Why, when Mister Gillis wanted a copy boy he didn't yell. He spoke in a way that made us feel he thought he was asking us some favor."

That maybe is why Bob Gillis always got a copy boy when no one else could find one.

WE ARE NOT going to say good bye to you Bob. We are not even saying au revoir. For you're not gone, Bob. You're with us, and will be with us—always.

There is no death! The stars go down
To rise upon some fairer shore;
And bright, in Heaven's jewelled crown,
They shine for evermore.

There is no death! An angel-form
Walks o'er the earth with silent tread,
And bears our best-loved things away,
And then we call them "dead."

And ever more, through summer,
The ever immortal spirits tread,
For all the boundless universe
Is life—there is no dead!

(Sir Edward Bulwer)

EDDIE MACK.

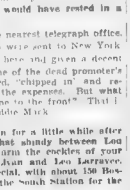
EDDIE MACK, somewhat loud, somewhat boisterous boxing promoter, may have his faults. All of us do. Personally have never seen any faults than a yaller hound has fleas. But whatever faults Eddie Mack has, no one can accuse him of any unkindliness of heart. When trouble comes to Eddie Mack, they tell us, alwa,s proves a friend.

Recently a veteran Boston boxing promoter and sport died in New York penniless, apparently friendless. The poor fellow had had many a tiff with Eddie Mack. Hot words ofttimes had passed between them. They were supposed to have hard feelings. But only for Eddie Mack that poor chap's body would have rested in a pauper's grave.

Mack rushed to the nearest telegraph office. Flowers and instructions were sent to New York. Flowers and instructions were sent to New York. The body was brought here and given a decent funeral. Eddie paid the bills. Afterwards some of the dead promoter's other Boston friends, shamed by Mack's deed, "chipped in" and reimbursed Mack for all except one-twelfth of the expenses. But what would have happened if Eddie hadn't gone to the front? That I one thing we are not going to forget about Eddie Mack.

Eddie is going to say "so long" in Boston for a little while after tonight's bouts at the Arena. And, folks, that shindy between Lou Scozza of Buffalo and Tony Shucco should warm the cockles of your heart. So will the battle between Vittorio Livan and Leo Larraver. Next Saturday afternoon the Eddie Mack Special, with about 150 Bowdoins of both sexes aboard, will pull out of the South Station for the Miami sands and the Carnera-Maloney bout.

KING TUT tells a good one about his fight with Bruce Flowers. Bruce socked the King on the button. Tut went down. Knew something had happened, but not just what. Decided somebody had been knocked down, but didn't know whom. So King jumped up and ran to a neutral corner. When King arrived there and turned around he saw Flowers in the other neutral corner. Both fighters were trying to figure out how the other had got there so soon.



BILLY GIBSON.

Tut says one happened almost as funny in his fight with Stanislaus Loayza in Los Angeles. Both landed rights. Tut found himself draped on the ropes, looked around and saw Loayza in a like posture on the opposite side of the ring.

Billy Gibson relates a couple on the two fights between Dutch Zimmer and Fred McKay, who won the Victoria Cross in the World War but was a notorious "diver" in the ring. To get McKay into the ring with Zimmer the first time Gibson called to tell Fred that he had "slipped Zimmer a pill." In the second round Fred asked Bill to give Dutch another.

"I can't, Fred," declared Gibson. "It might have serious effects. Give the pill a chance to work. Pretty soon you'll see him fold up."

When Zimmer was whaling the daylights out of McKay in the fourth round Fred dove into a clinch and over Zimmer's shoulder hissed at Gibson:

"When he comes to his corner, Bill, see that he gets another pill, even if it kills him!"

THE NEXT time McKay and Zimmer fought, relates Gibson Dutch sent Fred to the floor in the first round.

"Get up, Fred." Bill pleaded. "Get up! He can't hurt you any more. He has broken his back!"

Gibson says McKay crawled along the canvas to get nearer him and then muttered:

"I don't trust you any more, Billy. Remember how you lied to me in the first fight?"

WINSETT AND RYE STAR AT BAT

By JOE CASHMAN

Pensacola, Fla., Feb. 26

Those .300 hitting infielders which the Red Sox are so badly in need of are still among the missing down here, but in Gene "Half-Pint" Rye and Long Jack Winsett the club appears to have picked up two outfielders who will add plenty of strength to its attack.

A pair of left-handed swingers they swat right-handed and southpaw flingers equally well and hit as hard and far to one field as to another.

When the pitchers start curving 'em, the youngsters may not look so hot but at this moment they shape up as the greatest natural hitters that it has been Bob Quinn's good fortune to discover since coming to Boston.

And the minor league records of the two indicate that they are something more than spring flashes, for neither has ever been known to bat less than .300.

Since coming here, they have murdered every pitcher they have faced, and they have seen 'em all. Veteran stars like Gaston, MacFayden, Russell, Morris and Moore, rather than no more than the greenest rookies.

In the games as well as in batting practice, it is the same story. They are always riding the agate against the barrier.

Rye Hit Plenty in First Game

The two are as much unlike in size and style as it is possible for a pair of good hitters to be.

Rye is the shortest player on the squad and weighs not more than 165. It is a mystery where he gets the power to drive the ball so hard. He takes a mans-head cut every time he swings and according to the pitchers, he hits the ball where he is thrown. In other words, he bangs outside balls into left, grooves balls to center and inside balls to right.

Winsett stands three inches over six feet and weighs close to 200 pounds. He snaps rather than swings at pitches and seems to only recide balls that he sends out of the lot.

Winsett Has Only One Weakness

He hits occasionally to left and center, but always tries to pull his smashes to right. The veteran pitchers say that when the pitching speeds up, he will not be able to pull fast balls and is in danger of flopping as a slugger unless he learns to hit Inside Rye. But he certainly hasn't had any trouble doing what he wants with the ball to date.

Few batters can pull fast balls, but some can, and Winsett may be one of those rare individuals.

At any rate, both he and Rye look like sure bets to be retained, and when Oliver and Wells report next week they will discover that they have a job on their hands to keep these two kids from winning regular berths.

Kozeluh Forced to Quit Tennis Troupe

After William T. Tilden II, of Philadelphia had romped off with two matches, while losing one, his opponent and "world professional champion," Karel Kozeluh of Czechoslovakia, was so fatigued that he could not continue.

As a result of his physical collapse, Kozeluh will rest in Chicago and point the barnstorming net professionals Saturday night in Detroit.

Braves' Pilot Hopes to Have Team of Giants

St. Petersburg, Fla., Feb. 26—"Well at last it looks as though I have the makings of a club of man-sized men," said Bill McKechnie, as he looked over the new recruits who are seeking places on the Braves this season.

"And that's what I like. We have a big man for every spot on the club. Of course, that doesn't take in shortstop, where Rabbit Maranville, the greatest little big man who ever played ball, will still hold down that post.

"Take this kid, Charley Wilson, who will understudy the Rabbit this year, look at him. He's the size I like in a shortstop. He is tall enough to knock down those line drives that would elude a little fellow. He's fast, looks as though he can stand plenty of work and from what I hear he can make that potato with the best of them. This is just a concrete example of what I like in a ball player," he concluded.

And young Mister Wilson, whom McKechnie selected as an example of what he requires in a ball player is just the type who would gladden the heart of any big league manager. He's a fine upstanding youth of 22. He weighs 180 pounds and is just two inches shy of being a six-footer. He was born in Summerton S. C., the son of a country doctor.

Wilson Won 16 Letters in College Sports

After he was graduated from the little academy in Summerton, he enrolled at Presbyterian College at Clinton, S. C. It was in this little college that he gained considerable athletic fame. In his four years at Presbyterian, he made 16 letters, or just a few less than an alphabet.

When he received his bachelor of arts degree he went direct to organized baseball, signing with the Rochester club of the International League. That's a bigger jump than most college players make, especially from small colleges when an athlete gets little or no publicity outside of the small town in which the college may be located. But Wilson was always ambitious to become a big league player.

Wilson Hit .300 in First Year

From the time he landed in the Kodak city he hustled so there was little chance of anyone ousting him. He played shortstop most of the season although he did take a shot at third and second. He proved to the satisfaction of the pitchers' union he could hit, by turning in .300 for the season.

He was purchased along with Red Worthington, for the Braves. And despite the fact that he's understudying the Rabbit, he is confident he will make the grade.

Practice sessions are progressing splendidly. Bill McKechnie driving the boys through a rugged two-session drill each day. Nearly every man on the roster, with the exception of Maranville is in camp. And the Rabbit is expected in the latter part of the week.

Before what is expected to be the largest crowd in the annals of Canadian-American League hockey, the revamped Bruin Cubs will make their initial appearance on their home ice at the Boston Garden tonight against the Springfield Indians.

Pres. Francis Quinnet will be formally introduced to his players, the Bruins, and the Boston Hockey Club, fresh from its European tour, will be honored guests, and the gathering will be entertained by the 50-piece Boston & Maine R. R. band.

At the start of the season, the Springfield Indians were the class of all time minor league clubs. They got away to a flying start, winning 13 straight. Although their ranks have been raided time and again by the New York Rangers, they are still the class of the Can-Am circuit and would be many more games out in front, but for interference by their Gotham owners.

Bruin Cubs Stronger Than Old Tigers

In six games the Tigers were unable to score a victory over the Indians. But, Manager Frank Carroll will discover that the Cubs are a stronger club than the one the Indians have been pushing around at will this season.

In their last two games, the Cubs have opened up a new on the batting Philadelphia Arrows but they are by no means sufficiently established in third place to warrant a letup or even a slip.

Through the acquisition of Jack Pratt, from the Bruins, and Lloyd Klein, who was recalled from Syracuse, the Cubs have been rounded into a formidable aggregation. Pratt and Klein have brought some much needed strength to the Cubs. They are both hustlers and already have succeeded in instilling some of their fighting spirit in their new teammates.

The Indians have been running through opponents with little or no opposition this season. They have averaged better than four goals per game. Having carried on successfully after losing stars as Red Beattie, Joe Jerwa, Cecil Dillon and Buddy Maracle, they are a team of gamesters.

Holyoke Rookie Must Be Shown

San Antonio, Tex., Feb. 26 (AP)—Chief Bender, famous Indian pitcher who is coaching the New York Giants, has found a lot of company here. Representatives of three Indian tribes, Osage, Creek and Cherokee, were among the spectators at yesterday's drill. Francis Haley from Holyoke, Mass., was a bit doubtful about their being Indians. "Why, those fellows haven't even got a tomahawk," he said.

TWO WORLD RECORDS SET IN A. A. U. MEET

LERMOND WINS 2-MILE EVENT

New York, Feb. 28 (AP)—Two new world records were on the books, eight of the nation's best were their first National A. A. U. championship medals and six others were in possession of their second successive title today as the result of indoor track and field championships held in Madison Square Garden last night.

Percy Beard, a long-striding youngster from Alabama Poly, clipped one-fifth of a second off the existing world's record for the 70-yard high hurdles when he beat Lee Sentman of University of Illinois in :08 5-10.

The University of Pennsylvania medley relay team, with the diminutive Carl Coan running the anchor lap, slashed 5-1-5 seconds off the eight-year-old record in the one and seven-eighths medley relay when it defeat Bates College in 7.30 2-10.

Lermond Carries Off Honors in Two-Mile

The two new world records were made in a program that saw Ray Conger take the 1000-yard championship with his famous bell lap kick; Leo Lermond give 'em a flash of his old-time speed to win the two-mile title and Fred Sturdy leap 13 feet 11 inches to retain his pole vault crown.

Phil Edwards, who once wore the violet of New York University, and Hans Aasest of New York city were the only champions to repeat on the track.

Edwards conquered Sera Martin, world's 800-meter champion from France, to keep his 600-yard title. Assert led a large pack over the two-mile steeplechase.

The 1930 champions swept through the field events, however, as Harold Osborn repeated in the standing high jump, Anton Burg turned back Osborn and a classy field of youngsters in the running high jump and William Werner took the standing broad jump.

Five times Little Bill Carr of the University of Pennsylvania was forced to travel the 300 yards before gaining the decision over John Lewis, the chunky negro champion from Detroit city college. The pace was twice to quality for the finals and then fought through the last lap of the deciding race in a grand heat. In the run off, Carr nipped the title holder at the tape.

The Illinois Athletic club retained its team championship, scoring 16 points with victories by Conger, Burg and Osborn and a fourth place by the latter in the running high jump. Pennsylvania placed second with 15 points and the New York Athletic Club third with eleven.

Even Money Wagered on H.-Y. Tilt

Coach Joe Stubbs sends his Crimson sextet through the final workout today. The Harvard squad will be given a full holiday tomorrow.

A packed house is expected when the Crimson and the Blue clash at the downtown ice palace. The fact that neither team has been defeated by a college opponent this season has made the first game a complete sellout.

Harvard will rule a slight favorite at game time. The Canucks have the big edge in playing on home ice, the surface of which is much larger than the Arena at New Haven.

JOE SAVOLDI SUSPENDED

JIM MALONEY MEETS PRIMO CARNERA in Miami, one week from tonight, unless a sport's cyclone blows the match back to Braves Field, Boston, for June 30. If Maloney, a creature of moods, is in the same mood he was when he fought Carnera in the Boston Garden, he may bring home the bacon to Boston next week. Among the experts Carnera is a top heavy favorite.

PRIMO'S RIB IS HEALING FAST

Miami, Fla., Feb 26 (US)—Primo Carnera will positively resume training either Saturday or Sunday for his scheduled 10-rounder here March 5 against Jim Maloney. The big Italian has been laid up with a fractured rib the last 10 days.

Carnera, or at least his manager, Leon See, notified Promoter Frank J. Bruen that the injury is healing rapidly. He felt so good this morning he ran five miles "I have just returned from a long conference with See," said Bruen. "Primo was in on it and heard all that was said. See told me in no uncertain tones and terms that Carnera is going to fight Maloney. He declared, too, he expects Primo to flatten Maloney inside of the first three rounds."

Canzoneri Floors Kaufman 8 Times

Jersey City, N. J., Feb 26 (US)—In one second more than two minutes of the first round Tony Canzoneri of Brooklyn, lightweight champion of the world, flailed Joey Kaufman of Coney Island, N. Y., into a state of helplessness at the Hollywood Arena.

Canzoneri blasted Kaufman to the canvas seven times in succession, semi-conscious but courageous, Kaufman was game scrapping again when the referee ended the spectacle.

GOOD GOLF

By CHESTER HORTON
Golf's Greatest Teacher

One of the most important of the narrow margins in good golf I would say, has to do with the position of the right hand at the top of your swing. I think your right hand and arm cause you more golfing trouble than any other one factor because the right hand is so strong it so easily captures the left and makes it collapse. Or at any rate that's what the right arm forces you to do.

In making your swing from the side instead of from the inside out from the beginning of your back swing base your right elbow in line. Then make it stay there in the first half of the back swing—that is at the place where your left arm must be watched so that at the top your right palm is facing almost directly upward. This put's your right hand and forearm directly underneath the shaft. Then as you swing down your right arm and hand action will be delayed until the left arm gets the club into the ball. This position of the right hand at the top causes you to make more pivot too, which aids swinging velocity to the end. Finally avoid letting your head lift as this positioning of your right hand twists your shoulders around.

TECH CREWS IN RIVER DRILL

Technology crews held their first workout on the Charles River when three varsity boats went out in the lap streak shells. Coach Haines sent his two heavy varsity and the 150-pound varsity shells out.

The water was open directly in front of the boathouse, extending from Cottage Farm bridge down to near Harvard bridge on the Boston side.

Although Coach Haines has not signified which boat is his varsity, the unbeaten Junior boat of last year may row intact again this spring. Only Allan Latham was lost by graduation and his place will be filled by Capt. Burt MacLeod

Gossip From the Camps

San Antonio, Tex., Feb. 26 (AP)—Ted Lyons, who won 22 games for a feeble Chicago White Sox Club last season, and Urban (Red) Faber, dean of American League pitchers, are not agreed on what the new ball is likely to do for hurlers.

Lyons, whose specialty is the knuckle ball, thinks the pitchers will benefit by the raised stitches, while Uncle Urban, who has been throwing spitballs for 17 seasons, doesn't like it because he believes the stitches will afford more resistance, and that, he says, is no help to spitball hurlers.

Sacramento, Cal., Feb. 26 (AP)—The entire Detroit Tiger squad will begin training together here next Monday. Even Marty McManus star infielder, let it be known he would be on hand, despite asking differences with the management. He wants $13,000 and a $1000 bonus. He has been offered $12,000.

Avalon, Cal., Feb. 26 (AP)—Three recruits, two pitchers and an outfielder, have caught Rogers Hornsby's eye and appear to be set for a season of employment with the Chicago Cubs. The hurlers are are Ed Baecht and Lon Warneke. The outfielder is Vincent Barton who also firsthases some.

San Antonio, Tex., Feb. 24 (AP)—Manager Donie Bush promised Chicago White Sox pitchers they might be traded today but attached a price to the privilege that enthusiasm wanned somewhat. For each time at bat, the hurlers must do a turn around the quarter-mile cinder track surrounding the park at a brisk gait.

Bradenton, Fla., Feb. 26 (AP)—Mike Gonzales, who, according to Gabby St et, was "catching way back in my time and some just as agile now," is going to help coach the younger members of the Cardinals' pitching staff. Street believes the old Cuban will be able to impart many valuable pointers to the juvenile flingers.

West Palm Beach, Fla., Feb. 26 (AP)—The continued absence of Pitchers Walter Stewart and Warren ("Rip") Collins from the Browns training camp here today caused rumors they were holding out. Stewart was good enough to win 20 games for the 6th place Browns last season.

Tampa, Fla., Feb. 26 (AP)—Bennie Frey, once the Nemesis of the Chicago Cubs while the Cincinnati Reds played havoc with the Bruins' chances for the National League pennant, has taken on considerable weight and appears in excellent condition for the coming campaign.

New Orleans, Feb. 26 (AP)—Luke Sewell's continued absence is becoming embarrasing to the Cleveland Indians as Manager Roger Peckinpaugh nurses his battery corn into condition. The absence of Sewell leaves only Spring and Mealt on the catching staff and if the regular backstop doesn't put in appearance today he'll have some explaining to do.

Ft Meyers, Fla., Feb 26 (AP)—Hank McDonald, giant California right-hander, trying out with the Philadelphia Athletics, has the entire camp wondering how much speed he possesses. Capt Eddie Collins spied him yesterday burning them into Mickey Cochrane.

"Hey," shouted Collins, "don't cut loose yet."

"I'm not, boss," replied the six-foot-four rookie.

Walker Wins Over Risko at Miami

Miami, Fla., Feb. 26 (AP)—They may have to move over later, if not this year, to make room for the smiling Irishman, Mickey Walker, in the big scramble for the world's heavyweight championship.

Less than six pounds over the limit for the middleweight class, in which he holds the world's title Walker packed enough stamina and wallop in his 165½ pounds last night to hand a convincing pasting to 194-pound Johnny Risko of Cleveland

In the first of the winter's twin fistic festivals under the palms, Walker won the unanimous verdict of three Miami judges after 10 slashing, bruising rounds of punch-tossing.

Risko Groggy in the Ninth and Tenth

Mickey was held to close to even terms for the first eight rounds due to Johnny's bulllike charges and aggressive hammering, but the Irishman won the last two rounds by a wide margin to clinch a decisive victory.

Risko was groggy in the ninth and tenth under Walker's vicious left honks and right crosses to the chin. The Associated Press scorecard gave Mickey six rounds and Risko four.

Before Walker fought the main go last night, Max Schmeling, the German, who was bequeathed the heavyweight title by boxing Authorities and his American challenger, Young Stribling, appeared in exhibitions.

Carnera was a spectator last night and is booked to meet Jimmy Maloney of Boston here on March 5 in the battle of the cracked ribs.

The balmy weather the moon and the customers were mostly conspicuous by their absence last evening, although the show put on under the promotion of "Pa" Stribling was distinctly an artistic success.

The box office chuck-up showed approximately 20,000 cash customers and a gross gate receipts of $38,000.

These figures were below expectations, but sufficient, Stribling said, to show a profit. The arena, built in hosting's boom times, was less than half filled with fans, who paid anywhere from $1 to perch on the outer rim to $10 for "patron preve" chairs.

Badminton Tourney for Title March 2-14

The second annual Boston city and district Badminton champion ship tournament is scheduled for March 2 to March 14, inclusive, at the University Club 40 Trinity pl Ington.

Entries may be made by mail or telephone, up to noon of Saturday, with George "Joss" Willard, at the University Club An entrance fee of $1 for each division must be paid before play starts. The draw will be announced in the Boston Sunday Advertiser and the initial round must be completed by 10 p. m. of Thursday, March 5

TODAY'S TRUE STORY

GLITTER OF GOLD

Girl Acted on Trust

IT ISN'T OFTEN that a girl as beautiful as Effie Larsen drifts into the spotlight of the Great White Way, and it isn't often that she finds such a friend as Paula Maitland.

Perhaps it was because Effie was so innocent that Paula took her under her wing. "I'm hard-boiled," she told her a few nights after they'd met.

"I know this little old town backward and forward, and I'm going to save you some of the knocks it's given to me—that is if you'll let me."

Paula had been working in the basement for two years. Before that she'd been in a show and her ideas of men were far from optimistic.

"Give one of those rich birds a chance," she told Effie, "and he'll feed you up with appliances, take you around till the bloom is off the peach and then look about for another pippin—leave it to me, dear—when one of these wise guys comes snooping, I'll show you how to handle him."

"I guess there won't be any chance of rich guys dropping into the basement," she remarked.

But she was wrong, for the very next day following Paula's observations a young man sauntered up to the counter where Effie was disposing of neckties and selected half a dozen. He was a good looking chap, well dressed, with clear blue eyes and freckles, a snub nose and a smiling mouth.

Few men could look at Effie's wistful eyes without a feeling that they were back in the country, in the land of soft skies and dreams, and John Starkey was no exception

Johnny had plenty of this world's goods; he had made love as he went along; he couldn't begin to count the girls to whom he had whispered sweet nothings which they had hoped were the real thing.

Effie told Paula about the young man with a good deal of gusto. "He was so friendly," she declared, "of course I knew I'd be motoring with him—see here's his card. He's going to call for me."

Paula stared at the name—"Say, baby, do you know who that is—that's one of those rich playboys I was telling you about and if you don't belive me I'll go over to the library with you and show you his name in the newspaper files—why only last year some girl sued him for a million."

Effie laughed and went motoring with Johnny. He took her to Westchester and showed her the Concord fields. Then they had supper in [illegible] and motored back to town and all the time Johnny said not a word that Effie could take exception to. He did not even ask her for a kiss when he left her which many young swains back in her home would have done.

"Didn't I tell you so?" said Paula, "but wait, just wait."

Effie did wait—she went motoring with Johnny several times after that and then one night he asked her if she wouldn't come to his apartment; He had a surprise for her.

"Effie," said Paula, "I knew it was coming — don't you go — if you do you'll be the sorriest girl in New York tomorrow."

Effie didn't answer—but a most becoming flush mantled her cheeks. "Oh Lord," groaned Paula, "you're fond of him— it's worse than I thought. Promise me you won't go to his flat—promise me."

Effie shook her head "Why, nothing can happen to me," she assured Paula. "Johnny's been splendid to me—has just a wholesome young man and he told me he liked me better than than any girl he's ever met."

But after Effie, attired in her most becoming gown, had departed to the Park Avenue apartment of her admirer Paula couldn't sit still

All evening she thought about Effie—so pretty—so guileless—and then she put on her hat and proceeded to the Starkey address.

Paula needed all her courage to enter the ornate hall—all her nerve to walk to the elevator and announce that she was expected—all her assurance to persuade the elevator man to take her to the twelfth floor.

She was conscious of a sort of triumph as she stepped into the Starkey foyer. She heard voices in a far room—and that surprised her—she had pictured Effie as being alone with Johnny—but no—put a bold face on her intrusion when the butler asked her errand. "I've an important message for Miss Larson," she said, and then she saw Johnny coming toward her. She repeated the words to him.

"I hope it's nothing that'll upset her," said Johnny, "You see we're having a sort of celebration every mother's son back from Europe, and Effie and I are announcing our engagement in the morning——"

Johnny nodded and shook her hand.

"I ran into an engagement party," Paula confided to the elevator man.

"You ain't a reporter, are you?" He looked alarmed for a moment. Paula shook her head.

"I could have told you that," he said. "Mr. Starkey's mother got in from Europe this evening; fine woman, I'll say—and lucky girl too."

He Thinks Only of One Girl

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX.

BEATRICE FAIRFAX will gladly answer questions regarding heart and home problems. Address her in care of the Boston American. Write on one side of the paper only. If you want a personal answer enclose self-addressed stamped envelope.

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I have known a young lady for two years. I am sure that I love her because she is all I ever think about. She tells me she likes me and once she said she hated me. But she says she did not mean that. So I don't know if she likes me or hates me. I see her twice a week. But on the nights I don't see her I always see another boy. She claims she doesn't like him, but still she sees him and sometimes talks about him. She means everything in life to me. I would like to ask her to become engaged to me, but we couldn't marry yet as we are so young. But I don't like to ask her because of this other young man. From what I've heard of him I think he is more worthy of her than I am, but I just couldn't give her up. Please tell me how I can find out if she really cares for me.

ED

Dear Ed: The only way you can find out if she likes you best is to asked her if she is willing to be engaged to you. It's a young lady's privilege to have as many friends as she likes, and the fact that she talks about this other boy once in a while might be only as a spur to you. Of course, long engagements are not very satisfactory, but if she cares to consent to it, that is one way of holding her. Whether or not you are worthy of her is something you must decide for yourself and act accordingly. But it would be best to go to her, tell her your whole story and accept her decision in the matter.

Miss Fairfax is holding a number of letters for the young man who signed himself "Lonesome" from Florida, which he may have by forwarding correct name and address.

What's in Style for Spring

Coats Resemble Dresses

By AMOS PARRISH

NEW YORK, Feb. 26— There'll be many a coat this spring that will look so much like a dress it actually could be worn for one!

And there'll be hardly any coat that doesn't have some detail about it that's a detail you find on dresses.

This "dress-look" in coats is something to watch for when you're doing your spring shopping. Because most-in-fashion coats have it. And the more a coat looks like a dress, the smarter it is.

Just the way the coat looks when it's on—its silhouette—is like a dress. Most of them wrap well over to the left side, giving the effect of a dress skirt. And they fit softly and easy—as a dress does

Along with this wide wrap over effect goes the surplice or diagonal closing line in the upper part that you find in so many dresses.

The fashionable Spring coat is belted at the waistline like a dress. Any tailored belt, perhaps, like the one a tailored dress has. Or a softer, girdle-like belt, or a sash that's inserted at the waistline like a band.

Button Fastenings

Often these coats fasten below the belt with a group of buttons, such as you frequently see on dresses. You can see this arrangement in the sketch at the right.

When you come to look at the collar sections of coats, you'll find them growing very much like dress collars. Smaller collars—that's what you'll notice first of all. Some of them very narrow frill collars like the collars of tailored dresses. Others with scarfs that you tie in all manner of interesting ways—in cravat style, with a bow at the side, or just thrown carelessly over the shoulders.

New Sleeves

Others have wide envelope flap effects placed above a close-fitting under cuff, or puffs at the elbow or details or applques and stitching and many more of the decorations you find on dress sleeves

The two coats sketched illustrate very clearly what is meant by the "dress-look" of spring coats. The one at the left, with its yoke top and nonchalantly tied scarf—isn't that exactly the way the necklines of many dresses look? Of course it is.

As for the coat at the right count the number of dress details it has. (1) The cowl-draped collar of fat fur. (2) The surplice closing line. (3) The belted waistline. (4) The button fastening. (5) The wide, wrapover.

Small wonder if you aren't able to tell whether you're wearing a coat or a dress this spring!

Dandruff May Be Cured

By DR. COPELAND.

ONE OF the most common disorders of the scalp is the familiar trouble universally called dandruff

A great deal has been written about this disease and its causes Some authorities believe it is due to an infection They think it is spread from one individual to another by hats combs and brushes

Others believe it is due to neglect in the care of the scalp There is no doubt that neglect plays a part in the continuance of this disease.

Most afflicted persons neglect dandruff and make no effort to rid themselves of it This is unfortunate because it is not pleasant to see a coat collar covered with its scales

It is probable that a mild dandruff may be a normal condition If you have night dress scaling from the scalp, you need not be alarmed But if there persists a greasy scaly condition of the scalp, we are dealing with something that requires attention

An excellent way to control dandruff is by soaking the scalp overnight in olive oil, sweet oil, mineral or almond oil In the morning wash the scalp with an abundance of very warm water and soap

If the scalp is an oily one use green soap. For a dry one castile soap is preferable. The hair must be thoroughly dried after the washing and then it is well to rub into the scalp some sulphur cream. This may be repeated at least twice a week until the dandruff has disappeared

Unfortunately dandruff is such a trivial thing that most persons neglect it entirely. When it gets better, there is little attempt to prevent its recurrence

Proper care of the hair is very important. There is nothing more appealing than a head of good hair. To look after the scalp is an important step in preserving it

Abounding health is another consideration. A diet which includes the mineral carrying vegetables will help to make the hair strong

The prices of fruits and vegetables point to both here come down and there are no more healthful and necessary foods than these

HE MIGHT do anything, he responded, if it contributed to her contentment; in reality, he was glad of the seclusion offered by an off room, a library lined with book shelves and deep leather chairs. Evidently this room had been the retreat of Cassie's father; a substantial heaviness made it indisputably masculine, a piece of tobacco smoke, with whisky and soda. Easily at hand in the wall was a bell; pressing it, Garson summoned the butler, Higgins

"May I get you something, sir?" A skimpy man, passed middle age, Higgins mirrored the subtle deference of a servant toward a guest. So respectable was his appearance that even Garson, had he not known him, would have been taken in

"I don't think so, sir."

"All right—you can drop that 'sir' business. Loosen up and talk to me."

A change, a relaxation came over Higgins; he gave a backward glance at the door, crossed and closed it, returned and leaned back comfortable against the library table.

"You're looking good, Duke," he remarked affably.

"I ought to look good to you," Garson told him. "If I hadn't been here today they'd have called the police about those pearls and you would most certainly have been punished."

"That's right—but I didn't get 'em. I don't mind admitting to you now, Duke, I was tempted, but I didn't fall."

"Who did?"

"You can search me, Duke—on the level, I don't know. It was a clean, beautiful job. I'm not thinking anything, and I'm keeping my mouth shut. When I spoke to you about them the other day, I didn't realize that you—" He halted hesitantly.

Garson's eyes grew steely.

"You didn't realize what?" he demanded coldly.

"I didn't realize, at first, that you were up here on the job yourself, so to speak. Oh, I know it's none of my business, Duke—a guy in your position can do what he wants to with an amateur like me, and I've got sense enough to know it all right, all right. I never did get into big stuff myself, and I guess it's too late now to grieve about it. My wages here are pretty good and I'm satisfied."

Garson lit a cigarette and gazed half in amusement, half in anger at the respectable figure of Higgins.

"I see—you think I got them myself? That's what you think, eh, Higgins?"

"I suppose you're blind enough to believe that," Garson told him, unable to conceal contempt. "I'll put you right on the subject once and for all. I'm not low enough yet to steal from my friends. I'll go further, neither you nor anyone else ever can say I was linked up with the job. So if you are harboring any thought that I stole Mrs. Culvert's necklace, you're dead wrong, and a fool besides."

"I didn't mean any harm," Higgins apologized. "If you say you didn't, that's good enough for me, Duke, anytime. Anybody might fall for a string like that one was. We're all open to suspicion in the house."

"How about that young lady, Miss Kitty, did you ever see her before?" Garson demanded.

"No, sir, that is not until Miss Conde brought her home for a visit."

This was a relief to Garson; Kitty and Higgins had come from, approximately, the same neighborhood. Fortunately, their paths had never crossed, which made it less awkward. What Higgins did not know in that quarter, Garson resolved, would not hurt him

"I ought to get those pearls back for Mrs Culvert, Higgins," he went on. "Right now we can leave Miss Kitty out of consideration. She's as innocent as I am."

"Or, I," Higgins interjected

"Yes, I understand you to be innocent in this case, Higgins. Believe me, you had better be! What do you think about this fellow Tracy that hangs around here?"

A thin sneer formed on the butler's lips

"A ladies' man—no guts," he said

"We can't count everybody out," Garson insisted. "You have been here long enough to get a line on the life and the people around here. If you can help get those pearls back I think I can promise you a bit of reward When people do favors for me, I don't forget them. Give me your best—where would you start looking?"

Higgins gazed thoughtfully up at the ceiling and thrust his hands slowly in his trousers pockets

"If you were to ask me, I'd name a woman, he said, profoundly

"Yes, sir, I'd name a woman," Higgins repeated

"What woman?"

"God knows I never thought I'd turn out to be a stool pigeon against anybody, but you are a friend of mine, Garson, and anything you say goes with me Higgins said, with an attempt at sincerity. "You can't live in a family like I have been for several years without getting a pretty good line on 'em. Take the cook Miss Laney no chance there dumb but honest. Miss Connie and her mother, high class people not a chance

Gloomy, Weepy Conversation Out of Vogue

Men's Attitude Completely Changes; Selfridge Greets Rivals

By B. C. Forbes—

New York, Feb 26 Have you noticed among your friends that impatience now expressed whenever anyone starts talking dolefully?

For months after the stock panic men and losses and worries were the favorite topic through out the land. Jokes were cracked by victims of the disaster. Pov erty was accounted no disgrace.

B. C. Forbes

That attitude has passed. It is no longer considered good form to speak of financial or other troubles. People have become sick and tired of hard-luck tales. They also have had their fill of depression talk.

The popular thing now is not to talk "shop" outside of business hours. Even cheering statements can be made. The demand today is not for gloomy retrospection or introspection but for buoyant looking forward, for inspiration, for encouragement, for buckling-up energy.

So, if you want to make yourself agreeable, cease being a quitter. Get aboard the good-cheer bandwagon.

At the place where I spent Washington's Birthday, guests were turned away. I learned, on making inquiries, that this was the first time this year every room had been taken.

* * *

Henry Ford has been mum for an unusually long time. Does it suggest that there may be something in the rumors that he is busily preparing to bring out an eight-cylinder car to sell at a medium price, thus giving him his low-priced Ford, his high-priced Lincoln and an in-between vehicle? These rumors have been denied, but ask one other rumors which later turned out to be facts.

* * *

A very fine new store has been completed and opened close to Selfridge's, in London. Gordon H. Selfridge, the Marshall-Field-trained merchant who has become the foremost department store owner in Britain, has exhibited admirable magnanimity towards his new competitor. Mr. Selfridge, a unique personality, is the only business man in the world I know of who spends money every day in the newspapers to discuss timely topics—under the nom de plume of "Callisthenes." In the "London Times" Selfridge devotes half-a-column to "A Hand-shake of Welcome to a Competitor." These are extracts:

"We welcome our new competitor with absolute sincerity, in the same spirit as the keen player or the golfer welcomes a renowned opponent who will help him to perfect his own game, teach him how to overcome old faults, teach him new strokes, new tactics, put him on his mettle, quicken his brain, rekindle his ambition.

"It has now for some time been the mark only of the outsider in business to malign a competitor. You are expected to play opposite him keenly. Never, in fact, has the time been more necessary to keep alert the will to win. But the true and generous spirit of the game must dominate all our plays . . .

"To our new neighbors, then, across the street, welcome, we know, of course will play the game, as they always have played it, in the spirit of true sportsmanship, we offer a handshake of welcome and sincerest best wishes."

May it not be that Gordon Selfridge's own success is attributable to his broad-gauge attitude toward competitors? Happily, in America hostility among competitors is giving way to harmony. Business men more and more realize that, unless they can derive solid satisfaction from their daily activities they may not hope to enjoy a really happy life. It was Judge Gary's proudest boast that, when the Government sought to dissolve the United States Steel Corporation, not one competitor could be found to say a word against its policies and practices.

Success won at the cost of deserved ill-will isn't twenty-four-carat success. In she end it tarnishes badly.

ARE 10,000,000 SHARE MARKET DAYS COMING?

By FRANK H. MELOON

Wall St has at last seen one 1931 day in which the turnover of shares exceeded 5,000,000. Many in Wall and State Sts are predicting still greater activity.

"Are days coming his year when we will see a sales volume of 10,000,000 shares?" asked one broker.

"Oh, yes," replied his partner, "and the real question is how many of them will there be."

The record session for all time was Dec 29 1929 when 16,410,030 shares were sold. Five successive days in that turnover was 12,949,600 shares. The tickers then ran with the shares of big as well as stock prices, were falling

Dr Julius Klein, former Harvard instructor now assistant secretary of Commerce gives to the Ten Commandments of business and finance for 1931 a couple of other tables no nonsense here they are:

1. Don't blame the depression for everything.
2. Don't economize with a panic jerk.
3. Don't cut wages until every possible agency has been tried.
4. Don't drop relations with business associations.
5. Don't be satisfied with your present production methods.
6. Don't cut marketing research or advertising.
7. Don't overlook foreign markets.
8. Don't fall into the delusion that production necessarily means mass profits.
9. Don't ignore obsolete equipment.
10. Don't be stampeded by unfounded rumors.

Dr. Julius Klein

Dr. Klein's No. 7 agrees with what a great Newton executive President Walter W. Cutler of the United Fruit Co., was quoted yesterday in this column as saying.

* * *

Recommended for the consent of a Southern Federal Reserve Governor named Black is Dr. Klein's further advice. It is that we pay no attention to the "bunk" which declares American standards of living must be lowered.

President Francis L. du Pont of Indian Motorcycle Co. states that the 1931 budget of operations will exceed any 1930 business, but adds that this has had to be revised as orders have come in better than anticipated. At present the Springfield plant is turning out 30 motorcycles a day. This is to be increased to 55 next week and then to 40. Very little is being done on outboard motors.

Today's News of Live Stocks in Wall Street

Public utility stocks and the specialties were the leaders today in another spectacular forward movement, which carried prices of these favorites to the highest levels of the year.

Tickers Set Back by Utility Buying

Pools and professionals today quickly whipped up Consolidated Gas Columbia United Gas Improvement Public Service of New Jersey, American Waterworks and other utility favorites 1 to 3 or more points in a swift business which again taxed the facilities of the exchange and set back the speed tickers a few minutes

U. S. Steel Sets New High for 1931

U S Steel shot to a new high for the year today. Other 1931 highs were set by Bethlehem Steel, United Gas of New York and United Corp.

Overnight News Is Aid to Market

Although the overnight news, outlining the early business statistics still showed a very gradual upturn, wholly disproportionate to the vigor of the advance in stocks, if all relied to inspire participation in the market by traders who have been holding to the sidelines.

Bethlehem's Rise Is on Good News

Today's advance in Bethlehem was inspired by good news. The big steel corporation is operating at present at 35 per cent of capacity. This is the highest rate attained since mid September and exceeds the average of the third quarter of last year. A month ago Bethlehem Steel Corp. was running at 46 per cent. In December the rate was 38 per cent, in November 45 per cent, in October 51 per cent and in September under 49 per cent.

Columbia Gas Resists Selling

McClintic Merger Most Important

Most important move by Bethlehem in recent months was the acquisition of McClintic Marshall Co. This will give Bethlehem an outlet for its structural steel, as McClintic was he second largest fabricator in the country, being exceeded only by American Bridge Co., subsidiary of United States Steel Corp. It is probable that in coming months other fabricators will be acquired by Bethlehem

"New Era" Ideas Are Still Held

One important market letter writer said today:

"The utility and power group remains the most attractive from a trading standpoint, even though some of the bullish talk evidences that some of the bulls have not lost their 'new era' ideas. The motion picture stocks continue the most distributing, due to emphasizing of disappointing earnings by issuance of Warner Bros. quarterly statement.

Sinclair Due for Greater Activity

Evidence is forthcoming of creation of a new pool in Sinclair which has already started accumulating in this issue. The pool is claimed permitted shorts no opportunity to cover. Basis for the new pool's operations is the assertion that book value of the stock approximates $30 a share and selling and long security deals at about $15 a share, although this latter figure fails to take into account any profits any claim upon the assets. There are now 6,000,000 shares of Sinclair outstanding.

Frisco Weak on Dividend Reports

Early reaction to St Louis San Francisco has come in reflection of reports that the dividend rate may not be more severe than previously reported. The stock now pays $3 a share, but a $4 rate has frequently been favored.

Tri-Continental's Value Increased

At the close of 1930 break-up value of Tri-Continental Corporation holdings amounted $10 a share because of $40,000,000 outstanding issue of preferred, value of common in the senior issue enhancing more rapidly than does the market quoted. Tri-Continental is one of the largest investment investment trusts and is sponsored by one of the new Wall Street houses.

OLD COLONY IS ADVANCED IN BOSTON

American Woolen pfd., American Telephone, Stone & Webster, General Electric Railway & Light Securities, Eastern Gas & Fuel and Pacific Mills all tacked on a point or more.

Gains of 2 or more points were registered by United Fruit Waltham Watch, Boston Elevated first pfd. and Boston Edison

Gillette sank 3 points. Boston Personal Property and General Capital each lowered a point

Copper buying continues good on foreign account and is fair on domestic. Sales have been made in the domestic market at 10½ cents delivered but it is becoming more difficult in view of foreign sales, to obtain copper at that price.

POWER STOCKS LEAD WALL ST. LIST UPWARD

U. S. Steel common, which bulls had been holding in reserve at last, was suddenly jacked up to the best levels of the new year.

SOME SOFT SPOTS.

Some of the steels, electricals and railway equipments, and miscellaneous manufacturing issues made good headway, but most of the rails, oils, motors, coppers and merchandising issues held back. A few soft spots were uncovered.

The advance in U. S. Steel approached 2 points, and Bethlehem, Gulf States and Republic preferred made gains almost as wide.

Utilities rising 2 to 5 points included American Water Works, Consolidated Gas, Electric Power and Light, American Power and Light, North American, Public Service of N. J., Pacific Lighting, United Gas Improvement, Standard Gas, all of which recorded new highs for 1931.

General Electric, American Can, Westinghouse Electric, Underwood, Elliott, Addressograph, Dupont and American Locomotive gained 2 to 3, and Eastman, Auburn and Macy rose 5 or more. Simmons, which was a sensation of the 1929 bull market, was given a powerful boost for the first time in months, gaining more than 3.

In the rails, Frisco dropped 4 to a new low. Gillette was a weak feature, losing 4. Montgomery Ward lost more than a point of yesterday's gain.

The market still seemed to be insulated primarily by its own momentum, since little in the way of forward stimulus was provided by the day's news.

GOOD NEWS STUDIED

With the expected technical reaction of the previous session out of the way, however, traders had an opportunity to consider the mildly cheerful mid-week business statistics which appeared yesterday.

There was particularly the relatively favorable weekly report of electric power production, and the steady if gradual improvement in steel making.

Some brokerage houses have taken a precautionary attitude in view of the almost steady advance of the past three weeks. During that period the list has had only two substantial setbacks.

Nevertheless, speculative sentiment in Wall Street appeared independent of bullish, acknowledging that the market's recovery has run well ahead of the pickup in business, but pointing out that troublesome situations are out of the way and liquidated.

It is widely felt, however, that the market will have a rather dull day or few weeks, when it becomes apparent whether the recovery in business is only seasonal and whether an unusually dull summer is in prospect.

Call money continued a little firmer, with bills available under the official rate of 1½ per cent. Two per cent money was somewhat surprising after the turn of the month, which should cause a substantial flow of funds to the interior.

The weekly Ban kof England and Bank of France statements were constructive, showing a wider gain in London's gold than the further addition in Paris' stocks, in contrast to the recent tendency.

Midland Bank Sees Recovery in Trade

Improvement in business sentiment and the growing number of factors favorable for recovery are pointed out in the Midland Survey, a news publication of the Midland Bank Cleveland. In the Cleveland area trade prospects are definitely brighter than at the close of 1930, according to the survey.

THE SECRET SIX

"They got their nerve."

Colimo played several bars before he spoke again. "Rimsky-Korsakov's 'Romance in A flat.' Like it, boys?"

"Look here, Joe," he pleaded, "let me go along. I'm going to be in this business with you, and I might as well learn the ropes. You take chances—why shouldn't I?"

"No, Ivan," he decided. "Tell Eddie Kline to take six men and go down there. But—you stay here!"

"Aw, Joe, you still think I'm wearing diapers."

"I'm crazy about that kid," Joe Colimo says he'd followed Ivan to the door. "When he's out of college, I'm going to send him to law school."

"Speaking of lawyers, that's a clever mouthpiece of Johnny Franks'—that guy Newton. He gets them sprung after every pinch—sometimes I don't see how. I have a hunch we ought to get him away—have him with us. They tell me he's even organizing a political machine out there in Centre—they figure on electing their own officials, for protection."

"Yes—I used to know Newton well," Colimo's smile deepened. "Years ago when he was a big lawyer in the city I hired him once. But I couldn't afford much of that. Of course I was only starting in the wholesale vegetable business then; back before prohibition gave me a touch."

"You—don't do it. I tried," answered Colimo.

Colimo considered a moment.

"No," he remarked thoughtfully. "It would make a big row, because the papers all know him. And—I think booze will finish him quick enough anyhow. But we have to show this Franks' mob they'd better keep out of our territory.

Franks Uneasy

"Taking that bird a long time to find out what's in his cash register—" he muttered, "I wonder if he phoned Colimo—"

The answer came before he finished the question. The door opened, and in stalked Eddie Kluse, followed by six burly gangsters.

"Muscling in, hey?" demanded Kluse, approaching Franks' table belligerently. The men eyed each other and behind them the gang waited, watching.

There was a rush of feet—and the Franks gang was gone. The lights went on once more and Kluse bent over a body beside the mangled piano.

"My God! After 'em, boys!" he yelled. "They've croaked Ivan!"

Car Roared

Down the street at 60 miles, mufflers cut out, the pursued and pursuers flashed through traffic signals.

Past policemen, who shouted angrily; then careened toward the river. At an intersection, the Colimo forces gained, when the Franks car paused to make a skidding turn.

With a snarl, Scorpio was out and up the running board. Facing backward, he emptied his revolver at the pursuers. Bullets whistled about his head. He yelled in anger as one grazed his cheek.

The pursuing car slackened speed over the Bulfinch. Franks' car hurled itself forward until the speedometer passed the 70 mark.

Into the tunnel plunged Franks car. A truck rolled down on it. It slithered to a skidding stop. A collision was averted by a hair's breath. Franks' car bounded up a long, slippery hill they raced. The Colimo car gained, and the Colimo gang opened fire. At the top of the hill, Franks veered his car to one side. Another car dashed over the brow of the elevation.

Kid Got It

"Colimo's kid brother got his," muttered Franks. "And his was the one thing in the world Joe thought anything about. This business is getting trouble, maybe more than we can handle."

Newton considered. "Well — we'll carry about that when it comes," he advised. "In the meantime Ruggles phoned in — that new boatload of booze is down at our wharf on the river. He wants someone down there that we can trust."

Newtons eyes turned to Scorpio. Franks caught the look. "Straightforward," he remarked, "shot it out with Colimo's outfit on the running board tonight. He's got guts."

"I guess he's the man they want down there."

AT THE LISTENING POST

RADIO THRILLERS from the pen of Sax Rohmer, author extraordinary of the British Isles, have taken a real hold, plans are adapted from his magazine stories by publishers and now the problem—should he be paid more for such work as is used for dramatization on the air? He seems to think he should. He would. So would we.

* * *

SPEAKING OF DRAMA, no little of this type of feature is finding favor for daytime broadcasting. WBZ, locally, announces one for tomorrow afternoon that will have feminine appeal and it is entitled "The Pioneer's Wife." So if you are home at 3 o'clock, you can catch the playlet that is said to be based on the life and career of Sabra Cravat, heroine of the Edna Ferber novel and talkie picture "Cimarron," now current in Boston.

* * *

A COMBINED business and pleasure trip carries John Shepherd, 2d, to Chicago. The big boss of WNAC and the Yankee Network will sun himself on the coast and find time en route to inspect the Don Lee chain that operates west of the Rockies. Meanwhile, things hum right along at the Buckminster studios.

* * *

LAUGHTER AND PEP are the two principal aims of the producers of the Ten O'Clock Revue (WBZA at 10 tonight). The latter, the stuttering comedian, furnished the high spot for comedy last night, and we hear he is to be featured again. The atmosphere of the theater is cleverly introduced during the period, and the sparkling melody of Ranny Weeks adds a lot to it all.

* * *

THE SPARKLING new melody everyone is humming, and one the orchestras are going nicely via radio, is "We're Friends Again." Some wise-cracking announcer will be dedicating it to Mussolini and General Butler presently, Boy, page Cornelius Vanderbilt.

THERE'S ONE IN EVERY STUDIO. The pest that insists he can talk faster than Floyd Gibbons; . . . gtkf—gt-gtr.

WHICH REMINDS US to remind the public that Floyd himself is coming to Boston a week from this coming Friday to be featured with other NBC and CBS stars at an American Legion dinner at the Statler. We'll try to persuade him to spin a yarn over WEEI from the Boston American studio. How's that?

Air Features

The strains of Sarasate's "Zigeunerweisen," from Rimsky-Korsakoff's "Hymn to the Sun" and Dvorak's "Humoresque," from the violin of the world-renowned Efrem Zimbalist on the coffee program over WBZA at 3:30 tonight, make a rather uneventful radio night worth while for the dial twisters. This is Zimbalist's first radio concert of the year and will probably be the only one for some time to come.

* * *

For the third time in two weeks Will Rogers makes a gratuitous, microphonic appearance over WBZA at 8:30 tonight. In addition, James Melton, tenor, will sing three request numbers and Nat Shilkret will direct his salon orchestra in a half-hour of instrumental and vocal music.

A third personality who helps to make tonight's radio program a colorful one is Ted Lewis, highly-heralded band of the District of Columbia, from Washington, will be heard on this program which is purported to demonstrate to fellow students throughout the country the development of musical talent and interest in music in the public schools of today. Captain of Wrecked Ship Is Suspended

London, Feb. 26 (AP)—The court of inquiry into loss of the British steamer Highland Hope, off the Portuguese coast, last November, today blamed the accident on the failure of Capt. T. J. Jones to navigate the vessel "in proper and seamanlike manner."

His certificate was suspended for six months. The court held that the owners could not be absolved from all blame because the master was of such age that he could not be expected to stand the physical strain of commanding such a large

Marshal Foch's Memoirs

FOCH COMPLETES PLANS FOR GREAT GENERAL OFFENSIVE

In yesterday's instalment Marshal Foch told how the American army reduced the St. Mihiel salient in a single day as a preparatory step to the great general office to follow immediately. Today he describes his arrangements for this offensive.

By MARSHAL FERDINAND FOCH,

Translated from the French by Col. T. Bentley Mott.

WHILE THE AMERICAN Army was preparing and fighting in the Woevre region, a battle whose usefulness for the future development of operations was evident to all, the advance of the Franco-British armies between the Aisne and the Scarpe continued without pause.

Shaken by the piercing of the Drocourt-Queant line, driven from the valley of the Somme by the fear of Peronne, hardpressed on the plateaux north of Soissons, the enemy, as we have already seen, had been compelled to fall back toward the Hindenburg Line.

This retreat, begun on September 2, 1918, was continued until the 9th, and brought the Allies to the general line Arleux-Marquion-Vermand-Tergnier-Vailly. On this enormous front they had advanced from 12 to 30 miles in a month.

They now had to attack the formidable defensive system erected by the enemy during the winter of 1916-1917 on the front Cambrai-Saint Quentin-La Fere-Saint Gobain.

If we were to continue our plan of rapidly exploiting the enemy's disorganization we must launch as soon as possible new attacks in new directions joined to the attacks already under way—and which must be maintained—other attacks capable of absorbing a part of his forces.

In short, it behooved us to extend the front of our offensives while keeping it always headed in the same general direction. This was to be the task of the American Army on the right of the Belgian Army on the left.

On September 3, I sent to the British, French and American commanders-in-chief, a general instruction having for its purpose to hurl the mass of their forces against the line Cambrai-Saint-Quentin-Mezieres, where it would reach the principal German transversal railway line. This meant the launching, west of the Meuse, of a new and powerful American attack. The instruction stated:

"At present, the Allied offensive is being developed successfully from the Scarpe to the Aisne and is driving the enemy to fall back all along that front.

"In order to develop and increase the scope of this offensive, all the Allied forces are being thrown into the battle; they are following converging directions along those positions of the most promising favorable results.

Battle Plans

Two Operations Laid Out for the American Army

"With this in view, and while:

"(1) The British armies, supported on the left by French armies, continue to attack in the general direction of Cambrai-Saint-Quentin, and:

"(2) The Central units of the French armies continue their efforts to throw the enemy across the Aisne and the Ailette.

"(3) The American army will carry out the following operations:

(a) The offensive decided upon for the Woevre region reduced to occupying the line of Vigneulles-Thiaucourt-Regneville, which suffices for ensuring the rests in view. Our possession of the Paris-Avricourt railway line and securing a satisfactory base of departure for subsequent operations.

This attack is to start as soon as possible—on Sept. 10 at the latest—in order to allow the enemy no respite.

(b) An offensive in the general direction Stenay-Longuyon, as powerful and violent as possible, covered on the east by the Meuse and supported on the left by an attack of the French Fourth Army.

"The last named offensive will be prepared with the greatest rapidity in order that it may be launched, at the latest, between the 20th and 25th of September.

"Its first objective will be to force back the enemy, by operations on each side of the Argonne, to the line of Stenay-Le Chesne-Attigny, and afterwards to occupy the region of Mezieres, manoeuvring to the eastward so as to overcome the resistance of the Aisne.

"The successive stages of this operation are marked by the lines: Dun, Grandpre, Challerange, Somme Py, Stenay, Le Chesne, Attigny.

In tracing this outline of operations, I by no means gave up the idea of urging vigorous and direct action by the British armies against the Hindenburg line. On September 8 I wrote Sir Douglas Haig "to undertake at once the preparation of an offensive having for its purpose to capture this line and push on beyond it toward certain indicated objectives (Valenciennes, Solesmes, Le Cateau, Wassigny).

Sees King Albert

Belgian Army to Have Part in the Great Drive

I went next day, September 9, to La Panne, th. residence of the King of the Belgians.

I pointed out to His Majesty how, owing to the fact that the Germans were shaken and exhausted and that their forces were largely concentrated in France, a most favorable opportunity was presenting itself for us to throw in Belgium and reconquering the province north of the Lys.

King Albert was in full accord with these views and gave them his approval in principle. I then went to Cassel for a conference with Field Marshal Haig, General Plumer and Lieutenant-General Gillain. I now discussed the project more in detail and we worked out a plan of operations suitable for giving it effects.

The King of the Belgians having come to Cassel on the morning of September 11, I requested him to take the command, not only of the Belgian Army, but of the British and French forces designated for these operations. He agreed to do this and personally asked that a formal order to this effect be made out.

Marshal Haig had thoroughly entered into my views, for on the fourteenth he answered my letter of September 8 by stating that it was his intention to shortly launch a heavy attack between Vermand and Gouzeaucourt, so as to capture the enemy's defense west of the Saint-Quentin canal and the River Scheldt, thus bringing the British Fourth Army within assaulting distance of the Hindenburg Line.

On September 18 the British Fourth Army, supported by the left of the French First Army and the right of the British Third Army, successfully attacked the line Holnon-Fresnoye-Petit-Haricourt - Lempire - Goubeaucourt. Every objective was reached, more than 10,000 prisoners and 150 cannon fell into his hands.

Preparations were at once made with this in view. On September 23 Sir Douglas gave orders to his First, Third and Fourth armies for a general attack on the Hindenburg Line.

Meanwhile General Petain had been appraised of the intentions of the British commander-in-chief and asked to reinforce without delay the First French Army, especially in artillery.

It was easy for General Petain to comply with this request, for the front of the reserve group of armies had become shortened to such an extent that two of the armies composing it, the Sixth and Third, had been placed in reserve.

British Strike

Soon in Position to Attack the Hindenburg Line

September 26—A Franco-American attack between the Suippe and the Meuse.

September 27—An attack by the British First and Third Armies in the general direction of Cambrai.

September 28—An attack by the Flanders Group of Armies between the sea and the Lys, under the command of the King of the Belgians.

September 29—An attack by the British Fourth Army, supported by the French First Army, in the direction of Busigny.

The plan for this offensive comprised:

(1) An operation denominated "B" to be carried out between the Meuse and the Argonne by the American First Army, in the general direction of Buzancy-Stonne.

(2) An operation denominated "C," to be carried out between the Aisne and the Suippe by the French Fourth Army, along the general axis of the Chalons-Mezieres road.

Meanwhile General Petain had decided to extend westwards the front of attack of the Central Group of Armies. This was to be effected by "Operation D."—prescrib-d for the Fifth Army "for the purpose of capturing the Rheims forts and the Monts de Champagne.

Finally, in order to...disable the enemy's railroad at Chemin des Dames, where he might decide to re-establish himself, the Tenth Army had received orders to prepare an action of this sort with the direction of Chavignon and La Malmaison."

Old Age Assistance Bill Is Ridiculed

Editor Boston American:

I am a member of the Republican party since 1883, and it has taken 47 years to pass an old age assistance bill. Now they set the age at 70 years. It is not a square deal to old people where firemen, policemen, all in the army, navy, letter carriers, and all in state or city service get out at 65 years. Judges get half pay; police heads half pay, and what a horrible farce to pass an old age poorhouse pension of but $7 a week. A poverty room costs $3, meals $7, laundry $5 cents, making $10.58 the lowest possible amount a man or woman can exist on.

Will you in editorial of your paper get sarcastic on this old age pension, one of greatest farces ever passed by any state's Legislature.

Gov. Fuller said the pension system should be a universal pension, women at 60; men at 65; contributing 21 years to 65, share and share alike, about $20 a week. Which could be done if they shut off all these high pensions at half pay.

Senators, judges, etc., are not any better generally than the rank and file in Boston. Will you please run an editorial again on these sleeping men at State House?

I've been working since 1873, married 21 years, supported a mother to 28 years, all on mechanist's pay; 45 years at my trade. G. L.

School Girls Define a Model Husband

Editor Boston American:

New Jersey school girls, according to reports in educational journals, are out with a definition of a model husband.

He should be either a business or professional man, preferably a college graduate and in moderate circumstances. He should not allow his business interests to be subordinate to home interests. They must teach something in New Jersey schools to get this much out of any ordinary school girl. N. M. MELLON.

Fixing the Blame

Admiral Fiske Warns Against Scuttling Navy

Against the attempt of the Republican Party to scuttle the Navy, Rear Admiral Bradley A. Fiske, retired, has issued a warning that his fellow citizens should "read, mark, learn and inwardly digest."

"The refusal of your statesmen to harken to the Navy's advice," says this former chief of naval operations, "was the cause of all the graves of American soldiers in France."

The record of that conflict proves the truth of this assertion. Congress refused to provide and maintain a Navy powerful enough to protect American commerce, American rights and American honor on the seas.

When the war began our Navy was not able to protect this country against British, French or German assaults upon our sovereignty.

Neither American citizens nor American commerce were safe upon the seas. Finally, to safeguard both, this country was driven into the war on the side of the Allies.

After we got into the war and took to heart its lesson, we began to build a navy powerful enough to keep us out of the next war.

But soon after the Armistice our so-called statesmen again rejected the advice of the Navy. First at the Washington Conference and more recently at the London Conference, these so-called statesmen abandoned the program of naval construction which would have made us independent on the seas.

The Washington Treaty was ratified under the false pretense that it would end naval competition and enable us to maintain a Navy "equal to the strongest."

In operation this treaty did neither. It cost us hundreds of thousands of dollars and sent some of our most powerful ships to the junk pile.

Before this treaty expired our so-called statesmen negotiated the London Treaty and obtained its ratification under the false pretense that its terms would give us equality with the British Navy.

And now the same Republican Party, responsible for the Washington and London Treaties, deliberately refuses to build up the Navy, even to treaty strength, and also reduces its present effectiveness by cutting down the number of officers.

The truth is that if the leaders of the Republican Party had obtained MONEY under pretenses as false as they obtained ratification of the Washington and London Treaties, they would have been in jail long ago.

Now the Republican Party refuses not only to build up the Navy to treaty strength, but even to maintain the Navy at its present strength. It refuses to replace ships and it reduces the number of naval officers.

If this refusal stands, history will surely repeat itself and the United States will be driven into the next war because it lacks a Navy powerful enough to safeguard either our national security or our national honor.

AND THE REPUBLICAN PARTY WILL BE TO BLAME.

For "Free Health"

Visionary, But We Can Do Much Now

Dr. Gilbert W. Haigh of Worcester suggests free health for the people. He would subsidize the medical profession or have it under State control, its services free to all.

The good man, with his fine social sense, has vision; he may be many generations ahead of his time.

Isaak Walton said 300 years ago that "Health is the second blessing which we mortals are capable of—a blessing that money cannot buy."

We have learned much since then. Sound pre-natal care supplements the good work of nature, and the advances of medical science have taught us that health can be bought; at least, good health can be preserved and our national longevity rate increased.

Without waiting for Dr. Haigh's social plan, let us get behind the sensible programs of Governor Ely and Mayor Curley to expand our State and City hospital facilities. They afford "free health" in the only practical form now known to society.

Those Rollcalls

Legislature Should Do Business in the Open

There are two ways of acting upon legislation.

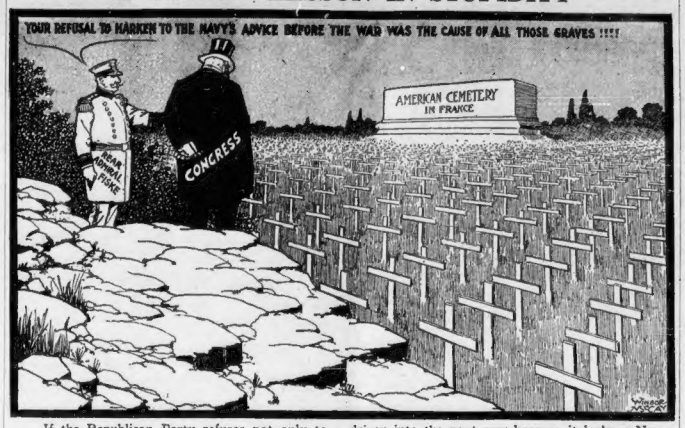
One is the secret, cowardly and detested method of whispering it to death.

The other is the simple, democratic method of having public rollcalls on all important measures and thus enabling the public to ascertain the attitudes of the public servants who represent them in the Legislature.

If the Democratic party in the Legislature is to be anything but a "me, too," party, if it has any respect for Thomas Jefferson and its founders, if it has any desire to command the confidence of the public, it will insist upon these rollcalls because they are the essence, not the pretense, of democratic government.

The statement that these rollcalls might offend the Republican leaders and thus provoke their antagonism to some of Governor Ely's policies is an indefensible excuse and apology. The Democratic leaders can afford to offend the Republicans, but they cannot afford to offend the public sense of decency.

A COSTLY LESSON IN STUPIDITY



YOUR REFUSAL TO HARKEN TO THE NAVY'S ADVICE BEFORE THE WAR WAS THE CAUSE OF ALL THOSE GRAVES !!!!
CONGRESS
AMERICAN CEMETERY IN FRANCE

If the Republican Party refuses not only to build the American Navy up to London Treaty strength, but to maintain it at its present strength, history will repeat itself and the nation will be driven into the next war because it lacks a Navy strong enough to safeguard national security and national honor.

New York Day by Day

Memories of Park Row

By O. O. McIntyre

NEW YORK, Feb. 26—Park Row as a journalistic haven is mostly memory. Reporters, novelists and short story tellers still try to thread it with romance, but it is in reality only a wraith. As a street it curls northward into Chatham sq. As the Fourth Estate's tribunal it is dead.

The Pulitzer building with its gilded dome valiantly and alone holds the fort to recall vivid days agone—days when Cobb was top-salaried reporter at $125 a week, when O. Henley wrote unsigned stories that convulsed the town in the Sun, when "scoops" meant something.

Park or Newspaper Row became the site of newspaper homes before days of the telephone and was so selected because of proximity to big news centers, such as City Hall, the West st. liner piers, police headquarters and the criminal courts building.

With telephones the disintegration set in. The Sun moved further up Broadway. The American occupies a huge strip along the South st. water front. The Tribune made a jump northward into the Forties. Others reared giant skyscrapers in mid-town.

Doc Perry's drug store, swash with tradition, is still on Park Row, but there is no "little back room." The patronage today is mostly suburban instead of journalistic. Folks come from those towns with the wild Jersey names for malted milk whither once came star reporters for eye-openers.

The picturesque saloons on Park Row along with those under the bleak shed of Brooklyn Bridge or on those cobbled streets slanting down to the East River are now quick lunches. German kitchens and oyster bars. Many are open all night for workers of The World.

Thus Park Row, the goal of every scribbler from out yonder, has become second rate. It is lined with shoddy shops—up stairs shoe parlors, down stairs pool halls, melodramatic movies, passport photo-galleries and "reliever" cellars.

* * *

A favorite haunt of mine in Park Row days was "Ham and" Dolan's. Here for 15 cents—plus a nickel tip—one could feast on a hefty slice of boiled ham flanked with beans, three slices of bread and a cup of coffee. Pie or ice cream was 5 cents extra. One saw many whose names became of great lustre—Richard Harding Davis, Albert Payson Terhune, Winfield Sheehan and William Johnstone.

* * *

On Saturday pay days impecunious pamphleteers lunched at Hahn's, where cocktails were 20 cents a throw. Golf was known remotely as a game where one hit a ball and walked after it. The newspaperman's sport was bottle pool.

* * *

Lou Holz is another Broadway comedian to produce and appear in his own show. Holz was singing in a San Francisco roadhouse when Elsie Janis heard and encouraged him to come to New York. Holz has fulfilled her prophecy with a bang.

* * *

Broadway lights once burned only for the stage stars. Today a half dozen stage names glitter. The feet twinkle for tooth paste, cigarettes, coffee, fountain pens and the movies. Or were you worried?

* * *

* * *

The boot-black in many barber shops in the metropolis is the "stool pigeon" for the hoss. He tips off irregularities among the barbers and reports any unusual vivaciousness of manicure girls toward customers. Many also act as agents for handbooks and often have greater incomes than the proprietors.

He is one of those old fruits English as an adenoid, who, following several introductions, now nods woodenly in passing. Having relaxed that much, I decided, seeing him this morning, to meet him more than half way with a little American cheerio, toodle-oo and pip pip. And the way he thawed out has me worried. I'm afraid he'll be popping in for tea.

Listen, World! -:- By Elsie Robinson

The Buzzards

And there, in the middle, some poor creature —down. Sick, wounded, deserted by the herd — huddled alone in its agony.
A day and a night — many days, many nights — it has stood there . . head sagging lower, lower . . . breath struggling fainter, fainter against the heaving sides.
One spot.
Two spots.
Three.
Moving a very little on great, sluggish wings.
Gathering, gathering.

Elsie Robinson

Three spots.
Four spots.
Five.
Now all the sky is dotted with their gathering.
And now they're dropping—slowly —down and down.
Then the end. One last shudder —one tortured, rattling gasp—then the poor carcass sprawls, legs all awry—
The circle closes in—
The place that was so quiet, now a hell filled with the racket of their rusty wings—the clamor of their gobbling, guzzling squawks.
Often, moving through life, I have come across a sight like that—
Ignorance—infinite as the blazing sky—
Loneliness—endless as the blistered sand—
And, in the middle of it, some poor spirit—down. Sick at heart, bewildered . . . lost, when it took that first wrong turn. There it stood, deserted by the human herd, alone in its agony.
Blank days and mocking nights—
Already the Spots are gathering—
At that first wrong step, at that first weak cry, they had seen, they had heard, from afar.
They had seen, they had heard—they had sent on the news.
And now they have gathered . . . and now they have dropped . . . and now they are squatted—waiting.
No mercy in that squatting circle of buzzard-gossips. No help for the stricken soul in those watching eyes. Only vicious curiosity and evil speculation and horrid, eager greed—
And now the end—
The shamed, bewildered soul has ceased to fight—it's down, upon the sand, its poor, sick secrets bared—its humor all asprawl—
And they are at it!
At it . . . the buzzard-gossips! A squirming, whispering mass—beaks gobbling, yanking at helpless shreds —the place a hell of horrid noises and robbing, guzzling "I-told-you-so!"
Often, moving through life, I have come across a sight like that. And gone on — sickened — hating men.

Think It Over

Drawn by Hal Coffman

Life is a wilderness in which the weak and irresolute lose their way. Only the strong and courageous scale the peaks, look about them, see the vistas that lie ahead.

And as this picture symbolizes, the first of life's mountains to be conquered is YOURSELF. There is no path around that mountain. You must face the climb unaided, no matter how difficult it seems.

Many never learn that lesson. They are too blind to see the obstacle or too cowardly to surmount it. But only from the top can you find your true bearings and glimpse the horizon spread out before you.

Until you reach that summit, life must remain a mystery to you; a tangled maze without meaning or plan.

The Marry-Go-Round

By HELEN ROWLAND

Mrs. Solomon Says:

MY SON, thou hast said in thy heart, "I am through with women! For, woman was sent into the world for the distraction and torment of man. But as for me, I require NO woman to brighten my life—and commend my days!"

* * *

But I say unto thee, better a dinner of spinach, and a women to quarrel with, thereover, than a stalled ox, eaten in peace and quiet!

* * *

For, what do all the viands of imported chefs delight a man's palate, if there is no dish amongst them which his wife hath told him is BAD for him?

* * *

Go to. What doth a house full of hand-carved ash trays profit a man, if there be no potted fern wherein to scatter his ashes, no satin-lined waste basket wherein to throw lighted matches and no mahogany piano, whereon to leave his burning cigarette?

* * *

How doth it gladden him, though all the world bow down before his wisdom, if he hath no wife to harken unto his priceless advice? And no woman who will permit him to "tell her how to do things"?

* * *

What does it signify, though he have the freedom of all the world wherein to roam in search of diversion and adventure, if no woman careth whither he goeth nor when he returneth, nor waiteth up to admonish him?

* * *

What availeth it any man, though he possess all the wealth of princes and racketeers, and have no woman nigh with whom to argue concerning the saving or the spending thereof?

* * *

What doth it rejoice him, though he possess all the beauty of Adonis and the charms of Apollo, if two women be not struggling for his smiles and breaking their hearts with jealousy over him?

* * *

What comfort doth a bachelor find in a soft collar and an unshaven chin? What joy hath he in flinging his clothes to the four winds and scattering his bath-towels upon the floor?

* * *

For, alas, he hath no woman to chide him nor to blush for him, nor to go about gathering up his things and imploring him to be more tidy.

* * *

Go to. What doth any sin or any folly or any diversion avail a man if no woman hath FORBIDDEN it?

* * *

A Dangerous Embargo
Can Uncle Sam Afford It?
Billy Sunday Says No
Four Things You Need

By Arthur Brisbane

LOS ANGELES, Feb. 27—A gasoline price war holds public interest for the moment here. Standard Oil of California's cut of two cents, made to meet erratic price cutting, will be followed by deeper cuts by other companies. The oil situation is bad, and an elimination process will gradually weed out weaker sisters. Then consumers that have been buying gas too cheap will even up matters by paying too much.

The antiquated Sherman act preventing common sense business arrangements make conditions worse. Some American companies demand an embargo on oil from foreign countries. Powerful companies that own inexhaustible subterranean "lakes of oil" in Venezuela and elsewhere oppose the embargo.

They want to bring in their cheap foreign oil. They are protecting this country's interests, perhaps without knowing or caring. An embargo would hasten the exhaustion of American wells, putting consumers and the mother industry at the mercy of foreign well owners. What that would mean the country learned when Britain controlled rubber and regulated the price.

President Hoover's veto of the soldiers' bonus bill expresses his sincere conviction that the bill would be harmful, to the country and the men. Repassage of the bill over the veto will, perhaps, decide whether the President and Mr. Mellon or congressmen and service men were right.

Many believe that making it possible for 3,000,000 men to spend a billion and a half of dollars quickly will help business and not ruin Uncle Sam. He found ten billions, quickly enough, when foreign nations wanted the money and survived that, although many of the billions will never come back from Europe.

Billy Sunday, at whose name gorgons and chimeras dire, yes, even Satan himself, shiver and shake, refuses an enormous sum offered for moving picture work. He makes a mistake, neglecting to put conversion and saving of souls on a production basis. His speeches lash sinners, and describe hell in a way to keep you awake, searching your conscience.

But what are words, compared with sight. Seeing is believing. Irving Thalberg of Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer would make a picture of hell in action, the arch fiend, devouring sinners at each of his three mouths, the horrid dog Cerberus with his assorted barks, the terrible hig swallowing her young and the saw-dust paths of the repentant would be crowded.

Billy Sunday's voice would be heard, above the crackling of flames, and the wailing of the sinners, saying "I told you so." What an opportunity. And at the end, a close-up of Billy Sunday, and "Ma" Sunday, their work on earth done, rising to glory, a million angels crowding to congratulate them, saying, "It's thanks to you, Billy, that I am up here, instead of down there."

If you have four things, intelligence, energy, money and interest in the welfare of others, you can do good work.

Mrs. Greenway, of Tucson, Ariz., has the four. She started a furniture factory, for ex-service men, not sick enough for a hospital, but needing recuperation in a perfect climate. She did much good. Then she built and is running a Tucson hotel, made up of separate bungalows, all furniture made by the service men, and all for sale to guests. Just at present, the place is packed, but try to go there anyhow, if you go to Tucson. If you do not go you make a mistake.

Such a woman as Mrs. Greenway, finding a way to help men injured in their country's service, working hard, with no profit and little thanks for herself, should be at least praised. Mr. Pepper, Tucson's dean of all newsboys, assures you that Mrs. Greenway is "an incomparable lady," putting the accent on "incomparable," on the ante-penultimate syllable, "par."

"She gave me," says he, "two tickets for the opera that cost at least five dollars apiece. It was called 'The Walker,' and say, you never heard that kind of music in your life".

ARRESTED BY FEDERAL AGENTS

Three Held for Grand Jury on a Charge of Conspiracy Scored by Judge

By STAFF CORRESPONDENT

Lawrence, Feb. 27—Two radical strike leaders were arrested on federal deportation warrants and a third faces arrest as soon as he obtains bail on civil charges as immigration inspectors entered the strike situation today.

The 13-day strike ended today with the return of 5000 workers to the mills.

Miss Edith Berkman, 27-year-old organizer for the National Textile Workers' Union, and William T. Murdock, a national officer of the union, were taken by Immigration Inspectors George A. Parker of Washington and Frank A. Chase of Boston immediately after they furnished $20,000 bail.

Pat Devine, union vice-president, was held by civil authorities in lieu of bail but the federal agents displayed a warrant for his arrest.

STRIKERS GO TO WORK.

The returning employes followed the result of an overwhelming vote late last night to end the strike and the Washington, Ayer and Wood mills reopened again with their return. They went to work through a picket line of 200, the latter kept moving by police.

Mill officials reported that the remaining 2000 would report by Monday, tomorrow being a half-holiday.

Ex-Convict and Attorney for Slain Young Woman Held on Diary Note Clue

New York, Feb. 27—Two men, one her lawyer and the other an ex-convict, were held by police today for questioning in the strangling of Vivian Gordon, henna-haired woman of mystery and vice witness, whose body was found in a ditch in Van Cortlandt Park yesterday.

Both were held, John A. Radeloff, as attorney, and Sam Cohen, alias Charles Harris, as a pitcher were picked up by police after their names had been found in the slain girl's diary.

One inscription in the diary, police said, read:

"I fear but one man and he is Radeloff, my lawyer, who, if he wanted, could get Cohen and a couple of his henchmen to do away with me."

Radeloff and Cohen were to be examined today as to their associations with the dead woman while police continued search for Patrolman Andrew B. McLaughlin, who arrested Miss Gordon on a charge of immorality in 1923 and was instrumental in sending her to the Bedford Reformatory. Yesterday it was said that McLaughlin had gone to Bermuda on a five-day vacation.

RECALLS BECKER CASE

The discovery of the body of Miss Gordon coming just at the peak of the drive on police corruption when she was scheduled to appear as a witness recalled the slaying of Herman Rosenthal in 1912, which sent Police Lieutenant Charles Becker to the electric chair.

Three taxi drivers were also being questioned by police after they had told a story of having chased for four miles a taxicab in which a henna-haired woman, dressed in black, was struggling with two men.

JEALOUSY MAY HAVE LED TO HAVERHILL ATTACK

Police Also Learn Man Called on Mrs. Ellis on Night She Was Beaten

By BERT FORD
American Staff Correspondent

Haverhill, Feb. 2[illegible] Beaten with a ham[illegible] Mrs. Clara E. C. Ellis was near death to[illegible] while State police and t[illegible] district attorney sought her assailant, possibly a woman, among her many "friends."

Authorities definitely established that the socially prominent and vivacious widow received a mysterious caller in her home Wednesday night, a few hours before her head was crushed by a hammer wielded in murderous frenzy.

Another who called that evening, police learned, was Maj. Ralph Townsend Heard, World War hero, who was host for the West Indies and had been given a farewell party, attended by Mrs. Ellis, in Brookline, earlier in the day.

Maj. Heard's call was one of many he made on Haverhill friends, including Col. George W. Langdon, that evening.

He was the first American artillery officer to fire a shot in the World War. Two weeks ago today he was sued for divorce by Mrs. Yvonne G. Heard, of Boston, daughter of a wealthy Canadian lumber operator.

ANSWERED HERSELF

Agnes Reardon, 30, a maid, and Norah T. Hing, 49, a cook, the only other occupants of Mrs. Ellis' home, furnished authorities with new clues today a short time after City Marshal Charles D. Jones and Chief Inspector Irving G. Hussey had been joined in the investigation by Asst. Dist.-Atty. John J. Ryan, Jr., who requested the aid of State Detectives Stokes and Ferrari.

Miss Reardon attended church services Wednesday night and Miss Hing was left in the house alone with Mrs. Ellis. It was brought out.

The cook said that about 9 o'clock, the wealthy widow informed her that she was expecting a caller.

"Will I answer the door bell?" Miss Hing asked.

She went to the door and the

SENATE UPSETS LOAN VETO

Senator Vandenberg, one of the administration stalwarts, opened the debate with a plea to disregard the veto. He dissented with the President "with the greatest reluctance," but argued that "the facts are the same as when the Senate voted 72 to 12 to pass this legislation."

"This bill is a sane solution to the perplexing question which some have proposed to answer with a $3,000,000,000 or $4,000,000,000 program," the Michigan senator said.

NOT CREATING NEW DEBT

"If there is tax increase next winter it will not be because of this legislation," he said. "We are not creating a new debt, but merely transferring the form of a present obligation."

Senator Hastings, Republican, Delaware, replied to Vandenberg, as Senators called for a vote. He deprecated the paying of money to veteran who returned from the war without injury.

As the roll call neared, administration leader conceded they would not have as many votes to sustain the veto as they had originally

New Delhi, India, Feb. 27 (AP)—Mahatma Gandhi and the Viceroy of India, Lord Irwin, had a long conference today and after its conclusion it was understood they had failed to agree on a vital point of the pending peace negotiations.

After the meeting Gandhi said the talks "might be resumed." This was taken to mean that it would be again necessary to refer the subject matter of the conversation to the British government for a decision.
